Mines Cheer Tax Repeal

British Columbia's mining industry has welcomed taxation changes announced by Mines Minister Tom Waterland Friday repealing the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act.

Starting Jan. 1, 1977, mines will pay a provincial tax of 17.5 per cent on net income.

This replaces a five per cent royalty on all production plus the 50 per cent super royalty collected when metal prices rise more than 20 per cent above a fixed base level.

Mining Association of B.C. president Douglas Little said the tax changes will encourage mining development in the province.

The industry was sharply critical of the royalties because mines were taxed even when they had no net income. They had also been critical of ministerial discretion in granting production permits. Little said the new legislation removes most of this discretion and will create more confidence and optimism in the industry.

R. F. Sheldon, president of the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines, said the mining amendments will give prospectors a chance to stake claims and explore for minerals knowing the right to mine is included.

The association said an exemption allowing mines with income of less than $25,000 to operate completely free of the mining tax would encourage the development of small but high-grade pockets of ore.

Morton Pratt, divisional manager of Utah Mines, which owns Island Copper Mine at Port Hardy, said the legislation was no surprise but "it was still a relief for mining companies."

A union spokesman said today replacement of the royalty tax by a profit tax won't end the problems of the mining industry and will enable many companies to pay minimum taxes.

Monty Alton, B.C. and Yukon area supervisor of the United Steelworkers of America, said the legislation can't solve the problem of depressed world prices for many minerals.

He said that when the world market slumps, B.C. mines shut down, and this has been happening over the past few years.

Significantly, the new legislation will not apply to coal.

Earlier, Premier Bennett said that instead of reducing taxes for the coal industry, he likely would increase them as the price of coal rises. He said coal should be treated like oil and natural gas, where government revenues increase as the prices go up.

Sand and gravel were also excluded from the new taxation amendments.

The change enables companies to forecast precisely what taxes they will pay in any given year, he said.

The new tax rate makes maximum mining tax payable 56.8 per cent on net income.

This includes the federal income tax of 27 per cent, the B.C. corporation income tax of 15 per cent and the new mining tax of 17.5 per cent.

Because of processing allowances, most mining companies would be paying only 14.8 per cent mining tax rather than 17.5 per cent, Waterland said.

He said the production royalties will continue to be collected for the remainder of 1976. This money, however, can be written off by mining companies against their new

Canoe Reaches Tahiti

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — A primitive, 60-foot sailing canoe has ended a 2,400-mile voyage from Hawaii designed to show that ancient Polynesians could have sailed the vast Pacific guided only by waves and the stars.

More than 10,000 people were on hand when the double-hulled canoe named Hokule'a sailed into Papeete harbor Friday, 34 days after leaving Hawaii.

The 15-man crew sailed without modern navigation equipment, but there were some concessions to the 20th century.

A radio equipment was aboard and an escort vessel was nearby, though out of sight.

MARCH UIC HIT $397M

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 862,000 people received unemployment insurance benefit payments of $397 million during March, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

This is three per cent fewer than the 891,000 who received unemployment benefits a month earlier, but the net payments in March were well ahead of the $341.91 million paid out in February.

Compared with March a year ago, payments this year were up $109 million. The total paid out in March, 1975 was $298.87 million. Figures were not supplied on the number of people who received unemployment benefits in March last year.

For the first three months of 1976, net benefit payments were up 21 per cent from the comparable three-month period a year ago to $108 billion.

Won't Quit -Aide

OTTAWA (CP) — A public servant abruptly transferred because he allegedly gave false information to his minister in connection with the Lockheed affair was reported Friday to have refused a request he resign from the supply department.

The report about Larry Stopforth was given in the Commons by Walter Baker, Conservative House leader, and was not denied by Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, who told reporters such dealings with public servants are not his responsibility.

Goyer said pickets at four Canadian smelters prevented non-unionized staff from entering the plant to minimize damage to the potlines.

Baker said he understands the resignation was requested by J. M. Des Roches, the supply minister.

Stopforth until Monday was deputy chairman of the inter-departmental project office that dealt with Lockheed in the search for a patrol plane for the military.

Goyer announced in the Commons Monday that Stopforth was transferred out of the project office for not informing him that the defence department considered it had a verbal agreement with Lockheed to finance the first stages of a $1 billion transaction to provide 18 Orion patrol planes.

Neither Des Roches nor Stopforth was available for comment.

Baker gave his report as he joined other Conservative MPs in demanding that a Commons committee be allowed to investigate the entire government handling of the now-defunct Lockheed project, which the opposition says has been bungled from the start.

In South Africa, a pro-white Rhodesian organization called the Southern Africa Solidarity Conference says it is recruiting hundreds of white South Africans to fill jobs in Rhodesia vacated by Rhodesians conscripted to fight in the war against the guerrillas.

Gert Beete, a director of the organization, says 400 South Africans have already volunteered since recruiting started less than a month ago.

Meanwhile, the Rhodesian government lifted today the restriction order on former prime minister Garfield Todd, who had been under house arrest for the last four years.

'76 Deadliest For Quakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 21 significant earthquakes recorded so far this year have killed about 24,000 persons worldwide. That makes this the deadliest year for quakes since 1970, says the U.S. Geological Survey.

The 21 earthquakes do not represent an unusual number for the first five months of the year, the agency said. But the death toll is up significantly from 1975 when 1,330 persons were killed in quakes.

Most of the deaths this year came in the Feb. 4 quake in Guatemala, which killed an estimated 23,000 persons. On May 6, another earthquake hit north-eastern Italy and took about 900 lives.

Nanaimo CUPE Decides Sunday

Nanaimo civic employees will meet Sunday night to decide whether to accept binding arbitration in their two-month strike in a pay dispute with the Mid-Island Public Employers Association.

Stan Boshier, president of Canadian Union of Public Employees local 401, said no other statement will be issued by the unions until that time.

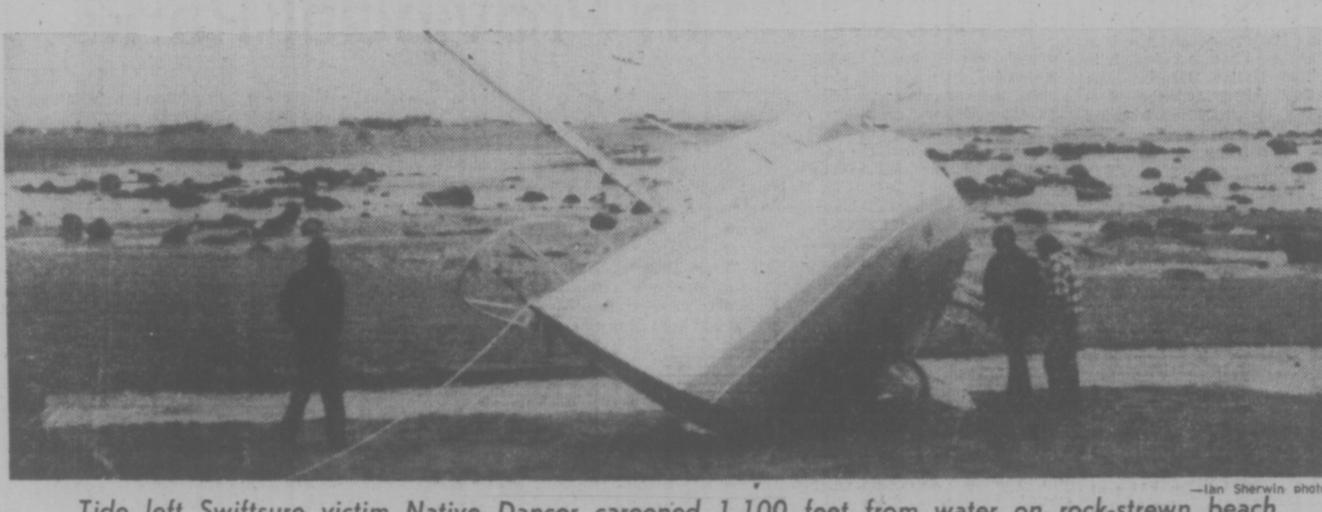

On Friday Labor Minister Allan Williams told the legislature an industrial inquiry commission will be appointed Monday in hopes of settling

GLAD TO BE CANADIAN?

With Dominion Day approaching, the Victoria Times invites its readers to give thought to what it means to be a Canadian.

Letters of up to 100 words in length on "Why I'm glad to be Canadian" are invited. They should be addressed to Canadian Letters, Victoria Times, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., and posted not later than Saturday, June 19.

A selection of letters will be published on June 26, the Saturday before Dominion Day.

'Kaffir' Insult Illegal

CAPE TOWN (Guardian) — Calling a black man a "Kaffir" will from now on be an illegal act in South Africa.

A local judge has ruled that the description is an "illegal assault on the dignity" of a black man and has awarded Delase Ciliza $155 in damages plus costs for being thus insulted by a policeman.

The judge reversed an earlier decision by a magistrate who has refused damages to Ciliza after a heated incident in a Durban street. The judge said that every one had the right to courteous treatment from the police.

He rejected a definition in a 1933 edition of the Oxford dictionary which said that "kaffir" was not an insulting term.

It is remarkable how quickly the meaning of words change," he said.

Hospital Votes

POWELL RIVER (CP) —

About 120 members of the Hospital Employees Union (HEU) at Powell River General Hospital will hold a strike vote Sunday, Johnny Johnson, president of HEU local 180, said Friday.

The salvage was carried out by a crew from Doolocky Seatech Ltd., 130 Kingston.

It involved hauling the 30-foot boat with its fractured starboard side 1,100 feet to the water over terrain teeming with sandstone reefs and boulders, some as large as cars.

Then came a 65-mile tow by the company's John Dobroch flew out to sea to assess the situation Monday morning, it seems impossible the Native Dancer was shoved so far into shore without hanging up on one of the huge rocks or reefs.

Two of the Native Dancer's crew, Dr. Gordon Augner and John Tonan stayed here to care for the boat.

Augner told the Times it was one hour after the Native Dancer was knocked down before she beached at 1:30 a.m.

"I realize the fears the union has about accepting binding arbitration but the opening of those schools is more important than any other consideration," Stupich said.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace pledged full support to the appeal. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson was not the house when the appeal was made.

The commissioner will have 14 days to bring in his report.

Empty Bed Cost $200,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian taxpayer will pay more than $200,000 for booked but unoccupied hotel rooms for Habitat delegates, a spokesman for the Canadian Habitat secretariat said Friday.

Jackie Wolf said an error in estimating the number of delegates to the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements — May 31 to June 11 — plus demands by hotels for guarantees share the blame for the expenditure.

She said the Hotel Vancouver, the Bayshore Inn and the Hyatt Regency — all sites known because of the shifting of delegations from one hotel to another.

Wolf also said that some hotels have promised not to charge Habitat for reserved rooms which they are able to use for non-Habitat guests.

Originally, the secretariat had guaranteed one night payment on each of the more than 4,000 rooms block-booked and retained. But nervous hotel management had later demanded more protection in case the conference drew fewer people than expected.

They failed to recognize in advance that a human settlements conference would attract relatively more technicians — on limited daily expense accounts — and fewer of the lavishly funded diplomats.

BC Rail Layoff Legal, Says LRB

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board ruled Friday that B.C. Rail was not acting illegally when it laid off 2,700 of its 3,100 employees.

The LRB said the crown-owned railway was not conducting an illegal lockout, but was responding to a legal strike by the United Transportation Union.

The railway laid the workers off May 18 and shut down freight service because of what it said was a strike by the UTU. The UTU had served strike notice, but said it was conducting work to rule, not a strike in support of payment of overtime on a daily basis.

the weather

Skies cleared over most of British Columbia during the night. The main exception was the northern coast where clouds and the odd shower persisted. Showers will gradually develop again over most areas during the afternoon then subside during the evening. A few thunder showers are also likely to form in the late afternoon. This pattern is expected to persist over the next several days as the cool unstable air over the province refuses to budge.

U.S. Feared Nuclear Plant Siege

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The security alert to 58 nuclear power plants across the U.S. last weekend was triggered by fears that two unidentified groups would "take over or occupy one or more installations."

The alert will remain in effect until next Tuesday.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission announced Friday that the May 27-June 8 alert was based on intelligence reports that "two groups may have plans to take over or occupy one or more nuclear power plants" or "take other actions in early June."

In an unusually detailed statement, the commission gave its reasons for alerting all U.S. nuclear power plants and said 18 previous threats had been made against individual installations this year.

The NRC said the alert took on more importance because of next Tuesday's California referendum on a proposition which would require the state legislature to certify the safety of nuclear reactors or ban them.

The NRC disclosed that the top secret credentials of two NRC inspectors had been stolen along with other personal belongings "and their unauthorized possession created concern that they might be used to attempted entry to a nuclear facility."

The Memorial Day alert said: "We have obtained information, not fully verified, for the intelligence community that two groups may have plans to take over or occupy one or more nuclear power plants on Memorial Day weekend or to take other actions in early June."

"Incidents have occurred at two other utility facilities during the past week that may have security implications. So far, the incidents have been scattered with no consequences."

Ferry Park-In Threat By Sunshine Coasters

TWO DRUNKS BAD AS ONE

PALMDALE, Calif. (UPI) — The highway patrol said the Burbank couple arrested on the Antelope Valley Freeway may be a record — a husband and wife, drunken driving team — driving the same car.

Officers who stopped the unidentified couple's motor home said they placed the throttle on automatic hold and she steered while he pumped the brakes to slow down occasionally.

Sunshine Coast citizens are threatening to take their cars on ferries this weekend and leave them in protest against tripped fares, John McNevin, chairman of the Sunshine Coast Regional District, said here Friday.

McNevin, who won't take part in the protest, said he hoped cool heads prevail and the plan is abandoned.

The "park-in" is being organized by a citizens' committee that has no official connection with the regional board, McNevin said.

"But the people are angry," he said. "Food prices have already increased in Powell River as a result of the ferry rates and they are expected to go higher."

McNevin and other civic officials met for an hour with Transport Minister Jack Davis, who promised to take the case to cabinet Tuesday.

McNevin said more important than Powell River's ferry link to Comox is the system operating between the community and Vancouver.

"That means taking two ferries so a car and driver now spends $38 for one-way trip," he said. "That's getting to be pretty costly."

WALKOUT NETS UNION FINES

QUEBEC (CP) — A Quebec superior court judge imposed heavy fines on two unions and 12 hospital workers Friday after finding them guilty of charges of contempt of court.

The charges arose from the workers' participation in an April 30 walkout which violated a superior court injunction suspending the right to strike at five Quebec hospitals for 80 days.

Mr. Justice Gabrielleballeau imposed a $20,000 fine on the hospital workers' union at Saint Michel Archangel Hospital and $1,000 fines on each of five employees.

He also imposed a $4,000 fine on the union at Saint Augustin Hospital in Beaupre, 24 miles northeast of here, and fines ranging from $300 to $1000 on each of seven hospital workers.

Both unions are affiliated with the Nonfederation of National Trade Unions, one of the three federations united in the common front of public service unions during the current contract dispute with the Quebec government.

After the decision, union lawyers Clement Richard and Marcel Dumas immediately announced they would appeal.

The no-strike injunction, granted at the request of Solicitor-General Fernand Landrieu the day before the walkout, also applies to Sainte Croix Hospital in Drummondville, Saint Charles Borromeo Hospital and Berthelet Centre in Montreal.

Fog-Bound Birds Plunge To Death

CHICAGO (AP) — As many as 10,000 migrating birds became lost in fog over Lake Michigan last weekend and plunged to their deaths, a scientist said Friday.

Dr. William Beecher, director of the Chicago Academy of Sciences, said the birds were killed "when there was considerable fog in the Chicago area."

Beecher said the birds fly all night during migration and land to rest during the day.

"But in this case, because of the fog, they flew out over the lake," he said. "Then, when they came down in the morning to land, they found themselves over water, surrounded by fog and all tired out. We estimate that between 5,000 and 10,000 birds were killed."

He said more than 100 dead birds already have been washed up on Chicago beaches.

"Most of them are warblers," said Beecher. "It's unfortunate because they are the most beautiful patterned birds we have."

ROME STREETS BATTLEGROUND

ROME (UPI) — Neo-Fascists and extreme leftists clashed with fists, iron bars and pistols in Rome's Piazza Venezia Friday night, marking the campaigning for Italy's June 20 government elections.

Police said the violence erupted "when about 30 neo-Fascists leaving the site of a rained-out political rally in the Piazza Santi Apostoli ran into a crowd of about 50 radical leftists, belonging to the Lotta Continua (Continuing Struggle) group."

Fistfights and rock throwing followed an exchange of insults and, according to police, at least two leftwingers then fired at least 10 pistol shots. Police intervened with tear gas and the leftwingers fled through adjacent narrow streets.

The Italian Social Movement, trying to project a law and order image, expelled deputy Sandro Saccucci from its parliamentary group as a result of the probe.

Time is running short. Buy Olympic Gold now.

June 15th is the last day you can purchase the unique $100 Canadian Olympic Gold Coin at the official issue price...

Seven compelling reasons why the $100 Canadian Olympic Gold Coin is destined to become one of the most outstanding coins in history... and why you should take advantage of what may well be your last opportunity to obtain these remarkable coins at official issue prices!

- 1 The Canadian Olympic Gold Coin is the first $100 face value Olympic coin ever issued.
- 2 It is only the second Olympic gold coin of any kind ever issued by a host nation.
- 3 In the entire 3,000 year history of the Olympic Games, the Canadian Olympic Gold Coin is the highest denomination Olympic coin ever minted.
- 4 With a $100 face value, it is also the highest denomination coin of any kind ever issued in North America.
- 5 It is being minted in a limited edition only.
- 6 The Canadian Olympic Gold Coin is being minted by the Royal Canadian Mint — internationally acclaimed for its rigidly controlled standards of quality and workmanship.
- 7 All previous Canadian gold coin issues have increased significantly in value.

Considering these facts, it is fair to expect that the $100 Canadian Olympic Gold Coin is more likely to increase in value itself and prove to be a solid and timely investment — especially when one examines the investment performance of other Canadian gold coins.

It could be the most interesting investment you have ever made. Examine the investment performance of other Canadian gold coins. It is a simple fact that people who bought any of the three previous Canadian gold coins at close to face value have multiplied their investment significantly. In fact, the returns on these three Canadian gold coins may explain why coin investment counselors often recommend them.

Hydro's Generous Predictions

One can't help the feeling that B.C. Hydro is almost as interested in empire building as it is in dam construction, judging from its electrical demand predictions. Hydro sees a demand growth rate of 9.2 per cent a year through 1991, while the B.C. energy commission prediction is for only 5.4 per cent per year. The discrepancy is important because it could mean billions of dollars wasted on power construction if Hydro is wrong. Current financial need predictions based on the 9.2 per cent increase figure are in the $17 to $19 billion range — an incredible sum to be spent in the next 16 years.

To ascertain the correct projection is very difficult because everything in Hydro is either under study or under water. The public receives few answers to its questions. A good example is the proposed Revelstoke dam. For the first time in its arrogant history the corporation has commissioned a full-scale environmental investigation of the project. At the same time Hydro admits the dam will cause severe environmental damage, but feels there are no alternatives. If the environmental study is a step in the right direction it contains little economic rationale for the project. And as long as this discrepancy in power projections exists between Hydro and the energy commission much doubt about the need for the dam will exist in the public mind.

It should be noted that the government's own department of economic development news bulletin for March states that the net generation of electric power in the province during January at 3.25 billion kilowatt hours was down 1.3 per cent from the prior month and two per cent from a year earlier. Even more interesting figures come from other jurisdictions. Ontario estimates its increased electrical demand through 1990 at 5.5 per cent, a figure almost identical to the energy commission's prediction. Oregon and Washington foresee an increase of only 4.5 per cent in a similar period.

One Hydro spokesman admitted the corporation has deliberately set its forecast somewhat high, adding that construction schedules can always be cut back. But if demand proved higher than anticipated, it would be difficult to speed up construction and manufacturing schedules.

While there is logic in the Hydro point of view it does not answer the salient question, namely what is the correct projection? All the evidence suggests that Hydro should produce an economic rationale for its projections. To date we only have the corporation's word that demand will be nearly 10 per cent per annum. As A. J. Hepworth, director of energy resource management for the energy commission said, a critical re-examination of all the assumptions underlying the various growth forecasts is urgently needed. Until Hydro can produce figures to back its grandiose plans the provincial government should keep a tight fist on the purse strings.

MLA Salary Cuts

Debate over proposed MLA salary cuts in the legislature Tuesday provided an insight into how our legislators view their own oxen. The legislation, effective for one year from April 1, would reduce MLA salaries to $21,600 from $24,000. Cabinet ministers would drop to $43,200 from $48,000 and Premier Bennett would receive $46,800 rather than $52,000 per annum. Given the cuts are only effective for one year, Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson's comments that the bill was devised as good slick politics is perceptive.

But the slick politics appear to work. There was most of the NDP caucus criticizing the bill vehemently on second reading and then surprise — voting for it. In a time of restraint no one wants to be labeled greedy. Perhaps the five MLAs who had the guts to vote against the measure on principle deserve mention. They were Gibson, Conservative Leader Scott Wallace, Graham Lea (NDP — Prince Rupert), Robert Skelly (NDP — Alberni) and Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie). Social Creditor Cyril Shelford was also opposed to the cuts in debate but was absent for the vote.

Restraint is equated with motherhood these days. But for formal cuts enshrined in this bill accomplish nothing. It is just a matter of showing the flag. Nor will the proposed decreases be felt equally among the MLAs. The premier, by all reports, could do his job for nothing, never feeling a financial pinch. Yet a Graham Lea or Cyril Shelford who have long distances to travel in order to serve their constituencies will be hurt by the cuts. Former premier Barrett said MLAs should be full time politicians and deserved a commensurate salary so they could do the public's business without constraints. It's still a good argument. In essence, these cuts do not affect wealthy MLAs while they severely hurt those of less comfortable means. Put another way, the decreases will do more harm on the NDP benches than they will on the government's.

If MLA expenses were to be truly equitable they should be pro rated on the distance to one's constituency. The current system is unquestionably discriminatory. So when Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says the Social Credit government has asked people of meager means to make sacrifices because of the years of waste and extravagance under the NDP, we have to swallow hard. Sure, the government has asked the poor to make sacrifices, but it is not a sacrifice for comfortable cabinet ministers to forego a mere $4,800 out of $48,000 for a one year period. The crocodile tears from McCarthy are unbecoming. This bill is a silly alligator that will bite the innocent.

Learning to Share In the Land of Nod

Standing in the legislature press box, sweating under the television lights, I listened to the governor of the state of Washington address the house last Tuesday.

A pleasant nasal voice emerges from a grey suit saying how the border divides us, but the interests of this part of North America are very much the same. Daniel Evans went on to say how important it was for Washington to have an adequate source of energy, even mentioning how Canadian skiers at Mount Baker sometimes outnumbered Americans.

Hands across the border stuff with some subtle advice.

Our MLAs thumped their desks in accord at the end of the speech. One by one Bill King, Gordon Gibson, Scott Wallace and finally Bill Bennett rose to say pretty things about the fluffy utterances. The rituals had been observed, ceremony was satisfied.

During King's gracious reply to the governor's address, he expressed British Columbians' concern about the Trident nuclear submarine base in Bangor, Wash.

Later, at a desultory Bennett-Evans press conference, an incredulous U.S. reporter asked Bennett: "What would you have the U.S. do regarding our defence posture in this part of the country?"

She was obviously pained that a foreign legislature would question U.S. defence rationale.

To our premier's credit he replied adroitly: "We are allowed the privilege of registering our concern..."

He explained that British Columbians were naturally concerned as they were part of the target area, adding that there were various shades of opinion in the province concerning the whole concept of Trident missiles.

It was a gentle putdown of the questioner by the premier defending a motion of the house, an elegant non-partisan gesture.

Still, it was an odd moment.

There sat the premier of British Columbia and the governor of Washington, powerful men in their own right. Yet neither of them can have any effect on nuclear missiles in the neighborhood. They know it, the B.C. legislature knows it, and the assembled reporters know it.

But there we all sat enacting this cockamamie ritual, this rococo theatre of rhetoric. It gave me a strange sense of helplessness or powerlessness, a feeling that is probably chronic with premiers and governors.

A day earlier, 70 miles away, Pierre Trudeau told Habitat delegates: "We have entered willingly, or otherwise, the era of a community of interest vital to the survival of the species."

... No nation can afford to isolate itself in self-contemplation, clinging to its breast its possessions in denial to others," the prime minister said.

The next day, Wednesday, reporter Nick Hills produced a confidential document from the Canadian delegation rejecting a 56-nation Habitat proposal which in essence said speculative profits from land transactions should be recaptured by the community at large.

The Canadian amendment apparently says a portion of the value created by changes in the use of land resulting from public decision or investment should be recaptured by the community. In other words, we opted for the status quo since the capital gains on some land transactions could be interpreted as "a portion of the value created."

Naturally, a country literally founded on the profit motive could not accept such a resolution. Land would no longer be a free market commodity. If our ideology inhibits our altruism now, what will happen when we have to make real sacrifices?

Yet this official squeamishness makes a mockery of the prime minister's sentiments about the need to share. As a nation we are all dubious, bourgeois hypocrites who believe our own grandiloquent phrases?

The premier and the governor contemplate grandiose pipeline schemes or speak of our common heritage.

The prime minister talks of a growing world altruism.

In the room the women come and go talking of Michelangelo ... I have measured out my life with coffee spoons, wrote T. S. Eliot in the Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock.

Meanwhile, the Trident missile is being tested, the submarine pens are taking form. Thousands of people sleep in the streets of Calcutta and millions of others live in mud huts or Palestinian "resettlement camps."

If this is the conspiracy of love through which we are socializing ourselves, as the prime minister said, I don't think I could handle any lesser sentiments. — G.R.O.

More Arms

In 1939 Canada was completely unprepared for war. Now in 1976 there is talk of closing down military bases across the country. What is the good of the purchase of tanks without the forces to operate them. More aircraft is what we need.

The unification of the forces was in my opinion a big mistake for which we have Mr. Hellyer to thank. Every man in the armed forces joins the arm of the service with the uniform that he is proud to wear. It is no wonder that recruiting is down.

Mr. Pearson was responsible for giving us a flag without character or history. Our men have served Canada under the Red Ensign a flag to satisfy French-Canada and a tribute to Britain's Union Jack without which Canada would not have been developed.

My late husband, Wing Commander du Temple, served Canada in the RCAF as a pilot for 6½ years — 1939 to 1945, and I am surprised and disgusted that the veterans fly "Pearson's rag".

The Red Ensign is the Canadian flag for me and is the one I fly at my home. — A. du Temple, 814 Ardmore Drive, Sidney.

the position of non-Canadians within Canadian universities and within our research funding bodies, I must protest. Perhaps my own experience may explain why Canadians will continue to be uninterested in this regard will insure that I will never again hold a research position in the country of my birth. Is there another country in the world where non citizens can discriminate against its citizens and call protests by its citizens, discrimination? — A "Canadian."

Enough

While the present government is getting a lot of criticism about the situation with B.C. ferries, the stage was set for this back in 1973 when the union went on strike against the newly-elected NDP government. Unfortunately, the government was anxious to please labor and the union was able to get the type of salaries that soon put the ferries in the red. They also adopted a policy of hiring more people than was actually required.

By 1975 the government was in trouble because it had failed to deal with the problem in time. Barrett toughened up with the unions eventually but it was too late and he never checked the ferry situation.

Something has to be done to get the ferries back to a reasonable cost of operation for the people of British Columbia. I say the union has to give in to some things because quite a few people have had enough. — G. Howland, Ganges, B.C.

Landlord's Troubles

Here's to all tenants: Please be advised that the 10.6 per cent increase in rents will just pay the increase in city taxes this year and that is all. Believe me, I know as I just got my tax notice today. This landlord has three units to rent, one-half of the house in which I live and a duplex in the city and my total profit for 1975 was $365 which is about 2½ per cent or slightly less. This is not charging myself for all the labor I have put into the property nor that of my wife as any wages we charged ourselves would have to be declared on my income. We have worked long hours cutting the lawn, tending the flowers and watering. One tenant asked to plant a vegetable garden which she did. She used the water that we paid for but did she even so much as put the sprinkler on the lawn? No she did not. Either one or the other of us has had to go to the duplex three times in one day to move the hose. Do tenants respect their landlord's property? No. So who would be a landlord? — Disgusted

Rape of Values

Land is our most precious natural resource and yet modern society permits rampant speculation and inflation in this very precious commodity.

(1) City lots in Victoria have increased in price 55 per cent in the last 10 years from $3,200 to $21,000. The same, of course, prevails in Vancouver and the other centres of population.

(2) A group of businessmen purchased some 25 acres at the corner of Douglas and McKenzie for $374,000 only three years ago and are now demanding $2.5 million for that property from the government as a possible site for a much-needed new

Although I am no Socred I would like to commend Mr. Bob McClelland — the minister of health — for his steadfast refusal to pay this exorbitant price when a gun is being held at the head of the public purse.

(3) Two million square feet of office space is said to be vacant in Vancouver and yet office and store construction continues. One the other hand the vacancy rate for humans is .03 per cent which is almost zero. In other words in our wild rush for riches for the few we have forgotten about people and their heritage of their non-renewable resource of land. Families with young children are denied apartments and accommodation in spite of the fact that these children will be future citizens of our province and surely should be given consideration ahead of profits for the few. The tragedy also is that a large part of this office and retail store construction is being financed by foreign capital and no thought has been given to the real requirements of the people of this province. Their only interest is profit for the few.

Is this what our society of 1976 truly wants? Apparently it is as the people have just elected a party which is dedicated to the myth of "free enterprise" and the rape of all values in the quest for profits for the few. Surely we should stop and ponder our future with more care for the needs of the people and not just profits. — M. P. B. Wixson, 1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Cadets Ignored

I have never been so disgusted with any news media in my life as the ones we have in Victoria.

Twenty-three Rainbow Sea Cadets returned from Moose Jaw International Band Festival on Sunday, May 23, bringing honor to our city and the cadet movement. The local media ignored them completely.

It is a wonder to me that you can sell any of your newspapers or that anyone watches your television programs.

How soon will it be before the principals of these concerns wake up and replace your incompetent staff with real live people? — Bruce Hider, 522 Hallsworth Dr.

Rotten and Mean

The article written by Norman Gidley in the Times of June 1 (Vancouver East: the Cinderella of B.C. Politics?) is without doubt the most rotten, despicable, vindictive, unpatriotic, undemocratic, rude and mean — indicating the type of person he is, maybe a dropout and not-dry behind the ears. Were his boss he would be fired P.D.Q. There was nothing humorous in his feeble efforts. — A Victorian.

Hire Canadians

I would like to take issue with recent comments made by Dr. R. T. K. Symington regarding the Committee for an Independent Canada's views on the need for hiring Canadians at the University of Victoria.

Dr. Symington suggests that a "brief perusal of the university calendar will reveal dozens of courses about Canada or with Canadian content." He is correct. In the history department there are a dozen courses with Canadian content out of over 50 courses. The record in the English department is even more dismal with four out of 54.

Dr. Symington goes on to suggest that Canadians themselves are at fault, having "neglected of been indifferent to Canadian studies." I agree wholeheartedly. However, Dr. Symington belittles any effort to change this regretful situation as "rabid nationalism." Such a charge is not conducive to the further discussion Dr. Symington says he welcomes.

The CIC does not feel any malice towards those foreign-born professors who come to help in our decade of need, rather we wish to pursue a more positive policy. Canada currently has a large surplus of graduates qualified to teach in our universities. There is some evidence to suggest that these people are not being hired and in fact are being passed over by staffing committees who hire friends and associates from their alma mater outside Canada. If this is not the case then why are qualified Canadians still out of work while non-Canadians continue to be hired?

We live in a country that is facing cultural extinction and Dr. Symington sees no reason to hire Canadians to teach our young about Canada. We have many qualified yet unemployed Canadians looking for jobs in our universities and Dr. Symington sees no reason for a policy which would give qualified Canadians first choice on new job openings.

The University of Victoria needs such a policy. Further we need a policy that would prohibit tenure being granted to any person not willing to take out Canadian citizenship, unless it can be shown that no qualified Canadian exists who could fill that position.

I wonder why we do not have such a policy at the University of Victoria? — T. L. Calkins, 1623 Amphion Street.

Whale Grief

In recent days two whales have died in aquariums, one in Victoria, the other in Vancouver. The experts are stumped: they do not know the cause. I wonder, have they considered grief? — Howard O'Hagan, 335 St. James Street.

Carter Cashes in on America's Redneck Chic

By SIMON WINCHESTER
Manchester Guardian

Driving a powerful car across America from the Atlantic coast to the rolling breakers of the Pacific Ocean must still be the finest way to gauge the temperature of this incredible land — even if the uninterrupted four-lane highway on which one accomplishes this feat presents a slightly denatured view of the country. It is certainly the only way — for those of us who live in the hot-houses of Washington for 90 per cent of the year — to attempt any solution to the most puzzling political question of the time: why, in heaven's name, Jimmy Carter?

After a bone-wearying program that began on the Capital Beltway outside Washington and went via Wheeling, West Virginia, Columbus, Ohio and Indianapolis, through the vast steel Gateway Arch at St. Louis, to Kansas City and up to the gigantic barrier of the Rocky Mountains at Denver, some clues began to emerge. Not the conventional Georgetown answers that related Carter's success to the people's "need for decency and integrity," but something closer to the small, subtle, changes in the national mood that are not so easily discernible in the bastions of liberal sophistication back East.

Take the dress, for example. In almost every Howard Johnson's and every Exxon station where the car stopped for cheeseburgers or 54 cents a gallon petrol, there would be youths in farmers' overalls — the bib and braces of the peanut farmer, usually made by a company called Oshkosh B'Gosh which emblazons its name in stitching on the chest. A red spotted neckerchief and a straw hat of sorts completes the picture: only a stick with a bundle of clothing on the end is missing. It is the Huck Finn look, a long way past the blue jeans and the earth shoes and kaffans of the young of the McGovern era.

What they ingest is instructive, too. Three years ago it was wild rice and Coors beer and cocaine. Today there is much delight wasted on what for years has been known as "junk food" — Twinkies and Ho Hos; Fritos corn-chips and jelly beans — the kind of thing for sale in neon-lit machines at all-night gas stations, alongside engines that dispense Mountain Dew and Doctor Pepper and a nonfizzy lemon drink known as Gatorade.

Grits — the white porridge substance ladled out with eggs and bacon in restaurants south of the Mason Dixon line whether you want it or not — is a spreading nightmare too: truck-stops and highway cafes serve it in Kansas and Nebraska these days, as if southern comfort was seeping slowly northwards.

Punch on the radio as the car hums westwards through the night and Dixie songs flood from every station, whether you are in Pennsylvania, Indiana, or here in the Pacific mountain wilderness of Oregon. Ever since the film Nashville, the cornball dances and dances of the white South have gripped half the country in their puffy soft embrace.

Dolly Parton and Merle Haggard and Johnny Cash — the latter part evangelist and part petrol company on TV — are all enjoying a new revival. Acid rock and black disco music seem to have gone the way of soul food and Afro haircuts: out with McGovern, McCarthy, and the misery politics of the Vietnam age.

There is, too, a curious intense craze now for the citizens-band radio and the ugly language truckers have been affecting across the airways for years. Betty Ford — "First Mama" is her c-b "handle" — downwards, the small black boxes with hand-grips and whiplash aerials have spread to a point where the ether crackles with non-stop greetings as eastbound caravan haulers greet west-bound truck drivers, northbound police serve notice of their coming to southbound commercial salesmen, and all in the curious old-fashioned rhetoric of the late night, greased hair, chicken liver lover.

"Ten four old buddy, see you on the flip" they yell as their trucks pass in a roar of spray and fumes. And they rejoice in communicating at last after decades of stern silence, glaring from behind the television pictures of their windscreens.

The one strand that seems to link all these relatively new appearances — the food, the dress, the music, the slang, and the renewed delight in cheap technology — is the South, and, more specifically, the white South. Through it all comes the smell of hair oil and muscle and sweat, and fervent Sunday worship and patriotism. "Redneck chic" might be the phrase, if sociologists were able to define the mood precisely. And there is no doubt who the spokesman for that mood would be today.

Forget that he likes Bob Dylan, forget that a Rolling Stone had just endorsed him, and forget that Georgetown is now beginning to like him. Remember instead that he is a peanut farmer from the town of Plains, Georgia, whose brother owns the World's Biggest Worm Farm, that he loves God and America, that he was an engineer, and that he eats grits, and you have it: Jimmy Carter, southern trash made good, in a country going through a phase of enjoying southern good-made trash.

Elizabeth Ray: The Education of a Party Girl

By MARION CLARK and RUDY MAXA
The Washington Post

Her eyes were puffy. Her flesh sagged below the chin. Her face was the color of putty, and Elizabeth Ray groped desperately for the electric outlet so she could roll her hair.

It was the morning of her debut on television as the Capital Hill secretary who ignited the sex-and-payroll scandal that ensnared her former employer, the crochety "Maylor of Congress," (Rep. Wayne L. Hays (D-Ohio)).

By the time the CBS crew arrived 20 minutes later she had transformed herself with paint and cream into a cameo of golden girlhood. The haunted and distraught woman of a few minutes earlier met the cameras with composure, smiles and fully parsed sentences.

That morning Elizabeth Ray (born Barbara, changed to Betty Lou, finally Elizabeth) found a mythic niche in America's white collar culture — the Secretary Who Couldn't Type but had other boundless skills to please the boss.

Beyond that, she lit a fuse under Congress, while forboding talk is now heard of a possible Watergate-on-the-Hill. Within 24 hours after her charges surfaced that she was paid $14,000 a year by Hays for little more than her sexual indulgences, a grand jury investigation of misuse of public funds was under way.

Now reporters for the National Enquirer lurk in the lobby of her Arlington, Va., apartment building with tape recorders poised. Hustler magazine, one of the most hard core of the girlie magazines, has tendered $25,000 to exhibit her in the nude — an offer she indignantly declined. (Playboy already has her scheduled for September publication, bare and frontal, taken before she went public. Boston's nude exhibition hall, the Two O'Clock Club, has offered $1,000 a week for her appearance.)

And yet, though she achieved her long-sought moment of national celebrity-hood, Elizabeth Ray sleeps fitfully in the red-rugged apartment in Arlington with its decor of assembly-line Mediterranean.

It is a prison in which her chief companions are a nurse and a yapping toy poodle puppy which alternately chews the rug and fouls the floor. She is anxious, confused and lonely. Her main link with the outside world is the telephone with which she calls her lawyer, her agent, her psychiatrist, the U.S. attorney's office and an aunt back home in North Carolina.

Home is what Elizabeth Ray has been running away from most of her life to a succession of jobs in dime stores, beauty shops, greasy spoons and finally Congress — not an uncommon odyssey for comely girls from the cities and hamlets of the Carolinas, Delaware and West Virginia who descend on Washington each year with great expectations and limited years of typing class.

The following year she lost the Miss Asheville beauty contest and briefly attended Blanton's College, a business school. Her life then followed a migratory pattern about which she speaks little. It reportedly included a brief stint in Hollywood and in Miami, where she attended Eastern Airlines' stewardess training school.

She came to Washington in 1968 at the age of 25 having by then abandoned beauty queen competition, stewardess training and business school. Washington absorbed her as it does so many unattached young women in pursuit of work and the excitement of a political capital.

"I can't help it if my mother is a tramp," Ray says sourly. "That has nothing to do with me. I wasn't even alive when she started being a tramp."

Ray says she isn't even sure who her father was.

Her mother, interviewed by the Charlotte Observer in the aftermath of the publicity over Elizabeth, had a complementary reaction: "I couldn't even believe my ears when I heard about Betty. But I can't help what my daughter done. I didn't know what she was doing. I didn't ask her any personal questions. It made her mad."

Ray says a man tried to rape her in her home when she was 12. She remembers her mother's words — "Get her out."

"Liz is a girl with a great body and... well... not that great a mind," observed Zeibert, a respected judge in these matters. "She's a sweet girl."

Ray summed up her role on the unofficial fringe of official life on Capitol Hill with one sentence: "I was hungry and I need a job."

There were rewards — glamorous dates, congressional prerequisites, exciting parties.

A parking space was reserved for her brown Corvette in the underground garage of the Cannon Building, a privilege usually bestowed on senior congressional aides. It was worlds away from the other woman friend of Sarris when she found it parked in front of his home, resulting in her arrest by Arlington police and a six-month suspended jail sentence.

Ray, nevertheless, put her on his payroll. Her typing, she recalled, had never soared beyond 12 words per minute. Her filing, she said, was the despair of the other secretaries. It was the evenings — at cocktail parties and political dinners — that she claimed became her prime period of usefulness. The former congressman, she said, "told me it was really important for me to keep smiling and talking to all these old men... cracking jokes with them and flirting."

Ray said: "It was the closest I ever came to being a prostitute."

Gray denied her account. "It is absolutely inaccurate," he said. "I never knew what my employees did after they left work. During my 20 years in Congress I was not in the habit of entertaining my constituents." He insisted that she performed routine office work in a normal way.

What no one disputes is that Ray acquired a reputation for availability in the world of lobbyists, entertainers, hustling lawyers, athletes, pub-crawling politicians and fast women. She became something of a fixture in well-known watering spots, especially Duke Zeibert.

"Liz is a girl with a great body and... well... not that mean to me. He treated me like a computer — do this, now do that." He didn't care if I had a cold or an asthma attack. I had to finish."

Hays, in an extraordinary public confession on the House floor May 25, acknowledged that he maintained a "personal relationship" with Ray but denied her claim that her responsibilities to him were exclusively sexual in nature.

One of their last arguments came when Hays married his employee of many years, Patricia Peak, on April 11 and insisted that Ray observe the occasion by leaving town.

"I said how can I go to California when I can't even pay my rent," she recalled. Hays sent his house Administration Committee office manager, Evelyn N. Wilson, with the $325 rental cheques, Ray related.

During an April 6 phone conversation Hays told Ray his marriage would not change their relationship. "Nothing is going to change," he told her, "if you behave yourself."

As it turned out, neither happened.

In my experience Western Tanagers are birds that are more often heard than seen. Come to think of it, my record with Scarlet Tanagers isn't much better. And that's a shame because the males of both these species — in their full spring finery — are really something to be seen.

Whether searching for Scarlets in the woods of southeastern Manitoba, or Westerns out here on the coast, I've usually had to settle for either a throaty, robin-like song or an equally throaty but abrupt alarm note. Now and then I might get a glimpse of color as one darted ahead of me through the trees, or see a black silhouette of one perched high up in some big tree, but that was the most I could count on.

But now and then I would get lucky.

It happened once with Scarlets in Winnipeg when, quite by accident, I came on one perched on a fence, out in the open, where its remarkable plumage could easily be seen. And from that experience, I can tell you, few pictures can do justice to that plumage and, even less, words.

The bird was basically red, as its name might imply: not bright, shiny red but deep, rich, glowing red which seemed to absorb, rather than reflect, light — the kind of red that can make its wearer invisible in green foliage. A pair of velvet black wings; and a black tail added to that momentary experience because, almost before I could be sure of what I was seeing, the bird was gone, leaving me with only a memorable mental picture of the event.

But that was long ago in Manitoba, with Scarlet Tanagers: last week I got lucky again, here, with Western Tanagers.

As usual, it was unexpected.

It happened at breakfast when a rather small yellowish bird with black wings fluttered across the opening between two oaks in the yard next door. My eyes followed it into the tree but the bird disappeared as soon as it landed.

While I was absorbed in trying to figure out what it was

You Need Some Luck To Spot a Tanager

I'd seen another darted between the two trees and again was lost as soon as it landed.

I began to think the birds were goldfinches but this didn't seem like goldfinch country so I watched some more.

Just when I'd given up hope of one of them revealing itself again, another made the inter-oak trip. This time, before it could scuttle in among the new leaves, it left a clue — a flash of red — which immediately set me off on another tack.

There was a strange, almost butterfly-like quality to the flight of these birds but this, plus their color, would not have helped me identify them had it not been for that flash of red. They had to be Western Tanagers.

The possibility of three Western Tanagers 50 feet from the kitchen window was enough to galvanize me into action and in a moment I was back at the window searching that tree with binoculars.

It seemed like an eternity before I managed to find one of the birds but suddenly there it was, in sharp focus, bright lemon yellow, black wings — with bright yellow bars on each — and a black tail. And, most important, a fiery red face and head. They were Western Tanagers.

The three became six before the event ends with the birds moving on through the trees along the coast. They seemed to be involved in the easy-going, leisurely form of daylight migration that birds which normally migrate at night use when forced down by weather.

So, after several years of searching in vain, luck had done what hard work had failed to do — put me in the place where I could get my first good look at one of our most strikingly colored birds.

The next day my luck had deserted me again. A throaty, robin-like song, coming periodically from one of the oaks next door, was all the Western Tanagers could come up with that day. And there was no way I could locate the songster.

He's still out there singing today and as far as I'm concerned he remains heard, but not seen.

Woodward

Woodward Stores Ltd. reports a loss of $475,861 or seven cents a share for the three months ended April 30, a $1,062,248 turnaround from the profit of $526,387 or eight cents a share in the same period of 1975.

Directors said that the loss was mainly attributable to losses incurred by the company's new stores, caused by the lower level of sales in the early part of the year and amortization of pre-opening expenses.

"In addition, the stores in British Columbia have been more affected than those in Alberta due to the differences in the economies of the two provinces," directors said.

Total operating revenue for the quarter was $141,601,326, a 19.3 per cent increase from $118,728,946 for the previous corresponding period.

Teck Corporation

Operating profit of Teck Corporation Ltd. dropped to $59,000 or 8.7 cents a share from $1.65 million or 24.2 cents a share in the six months ended March 31, the company reports.

After extraordinary items of $75,000, net earnings for the period were $75,000, net earnings for the second half of 1976.

Passmore Place is growing... beautifully

Phase 3 completely sold out.
Phase 5 ready for your inspection

The move to Saanich made never more sense than now. Tucked away among hills and trees, Passmore Place has become the showplace in this quiet suburb, just 6 miles away from downtown Victoria.

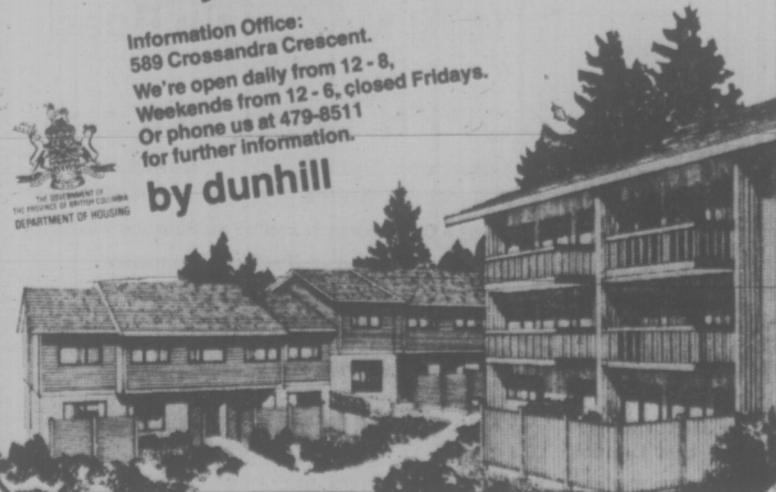

Now a new phase is ready for your inspection: Immaculate two, three and four-bedroom townhouses, featuring full basements, completely coordinated kitchens, wall-to-wall carpeting throughout. That's honest-to-goodness value for your money, and one of the best investments you'll ever make. Come by this weekend and see for yourself.

Falling Interest Rates Predicted

By AL FORREST

Times Business Editor

en to 8.75 per cent from 9.25 per cent.

For 60 to 89 days, the rate is down to 9 per cent from 9.5 per cent.

Rates will vary slightly from company to company.

At the other end of the scale, interest rates have risen slightly for terms of more than four years.

The new rate quoted at some companies is 10.5 per cent, up from 10.25 per cent.

Under normal circumstances this would push up the mortgage interest rate, but at 12 to 12.25 per cent it is about as high as it can go at the moment, given the current state of the real estate market. There are surplus funds in the mortgage pool and only moderate demand.

The next move in all interest rates is expected to be downward, although pressure from south of the border could alter the trend.

Interest rates for short term funds in the U.S. are trending upwards. Canadian rates always have to remain slightly above those in the U.S. in order to attract capital into this country.

In the money market, the U.S. dollar is strengthening because of the rising interest rates and the decline in the trade deficit in that country.

West German marks are also trending lower following reports of a disappointing small trade surplus.

The Swiss franc continues to be strong as traders move out of sterling and other currencies and into francs.

The Italian lira has stabilized but remains basically weak.

Competition Policy Report: Laissez-Faire, Intervention

By MARGARET PITON

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Competition policy proposals by an independent five-member committee released earlier this week are a curious amalgam of laissez-faire and interventionism.

The clear thrust of the proposals is against heavy government interference in the economy, but the proposals also recognize the need for a tougher anti-combines policy.

The composition of the five-member committee, which is somewhat top-heavy in favor of business, may be responsible for some of the laissez-faire bias. William O. Twain, former chairman of Imperial Oil and director of several large companies including the Royal Bank, Reuben Bromstein, counsel for the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, and Michel Belanger, president of the Provincial Bank of Canada and former head of the Montreal Stock Exchange, could not be expected to be strongly in favor of government intervention.

But their proposals on mergers, monopolies, and pricing are not much different from those contained in the 1971 Combines Investigation Act, which aroused considerable business opposition.

What the committee proposes is in some respects rather idealistic. The proposed National Markets Board, which would replace the existing Restrictive Trade Practices Commission, would have wide scope for action within certain well-defined areas. There would be no question of petty regulations to hamper the honest businessman. But within well-defined limits, the board could use its discretion to order divestiture of assets or to prohibit certain mergers in certain circumstances.

Clearly the system would hinge on the competence of board members and staff. But most regulatory systems do ultimately depend on one degree or other on competent enforcement.

The committee's proposals contain a number of statements which are refreshing in their candor. One such is a clear indictment of the system of cost justification of price increases which has become universalized through the current price control scheme.

Pricing based on short-run cost factors "if permitted to become embedded in public policy, is almost certain to present formidable obstacles for the regeneration of a market-directed, private enterprise system," they noted.

The point is that cost-justification for pricing assumes a static system with a "fair" rate of return on investment by companies. This is similar to the static, regulated economic system characteristic of the Middle Ages, which had none of the dynamic advantages of free enterprise. Free enterprise is basically justifiable only as a means to a more efficient use of re-

Polished Skills Outrace Thieves

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It was an 89-mile-an-hour car chase, just like those on the TV cop shows. Car thief in one vehicle, policeman in his cruiser.

It began one recent day in busy downtown Minneapolis and ended 25 miles later in suburban St. Louis Park with the arrest of the thief.

Not unusual, really, unless you consider that eight miles of the high-speed pursuit took place going south on a northbound lane of a freeway. The rookie driver had been on active duty only a month, but had polished his skills in the Minneapolis Police Department's Emergency Reaction Driving School (EMRAD).

In 1973, Minneapolis police had 113 accidents with their 178-car fleet. EMRAD was set up that year in a corner of Minneapolis International Airport.

In 1975, with 198 cars in the fleet, accidents dropped to 89. The severity of police-car accidents and time lost by police as a result dropped sharply.

The school operated last year with seven instructors and a $2,000 budget.

Sgt. Raymond Morse and Officer Gary Fey set up the school, patterned after one in Los Angeles. They designed a mile-long course with nine obstacles, to teach such skills as controlled braking, accident prevention by evasive driving without braking, controlled sliding on wet or icy roads, U turns, 90-degree turns, rhythmic driving and even such standards as backing and parking.

At first, an instructor riding beside the student gave voice commands for manoeuvres such as controlled braking or swerving. The student had only two seconds to react correctly. But a half-second delay in the voice command could make a difference of 20 to 30 feet in the reaction space available to the student.

Pneumatic hoses were installed, designed to set off an immediate signal. But these broke frequently, disrupting called for more practice.

"We found that many students could execute the manoeuvres at 30 to 35 miles an hour but would have trouble at 40 to 45 m.p.h.," said Morse. "This immediately called for more practice."

"Would you believe our biggest enemy was attitude?" Morse said. "Our drivers thought they were the best already. Also, they were afraid to flunk. We solved this by sending the 'brass' through the course at the start of 1975, and we eliminated pass and fail grades."

Stained Glass No Gold Mine

TORONTO (CP) — Russell Goodman makes a comfortable living and works reasonable hours now but earlier in his career he earned 25 cents an hour for an 18-hour day.

The Toronto stained-glass artist says he will never be rich but to him work is a labor of love.

"Stained-glass art has always been a poorly paid profession," he says. "I've reached a point where the work is there because I've spent 30 years building up my reputation and a style of my own."

Mr. Goodman learned his profession through four years of apprenticeship and says there are few competent stained-glass artists in Canada.

One of his jobs, which took 2½ years to complete, was the painting of provincial flower designs on the House of Commons' windows in Ottawa.

A major Goodman work is at the Providence Villa Nursing Home in eastern Toronto, where he spent two years designing, drawing and painting 2,000 square feet of windows.

He says he did that job for love because "you have to start somewhere and you have to be willing to sacrifice things in the beginning."

The longest time he spent on a single building was the five years it took to complete a job at a cathedral in Thunder Bay.

Although 90 per cent of Mr. Goodman's commissions are from churches, sometimes he designs and paints glass for restaurants and public buildings.

The candidate should possess strong personal communication skills, able to demonstrate first class reporting and writing ability, have experience in publication layout and production, and a good knowledge of photography and graphic composition. A knowledge of the forest industry would be desirable.

The job mainly involves reporting on the achievements and activities of some 5500 employees, the company they work for, and its plans and progress. Some travel is involved since the company's operations cover widespread areas in B.C.

This is a challenging position in B.C.'s forest industry with excellent salary and benefits for a qualified person; a good career opportunity.

Please forward a detailed resume of education, work experience and other related information to:

Lauk Attacks Crony System

Premier Bennett is insensitive to a conflict of interest situation involving a B.C. Hydro director, Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) said Friday in the legislature.

Lauk said the conflict centred around Roderick Hungford, who is on the board of directors of Inland Natural Gas and a recent appointee of the Social Credit government to Hydro's board.

Lauk made his comments during debate on budget estimates for the premier's office.

Lauk said that in February, 1974, Austin Taylor, Jr., a fund-raiser for the Social Credit party, met with James Rhodes, then chairman of the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Taylor was representing Inland Natural Gas, Lauk said, and offered to buy B.C. Hydro's natural gas business. He said the offer was rejected.

Considering that offer, Lauk said, it is clear there is a serious conflict now that Hungford sits on Hydro's board of directors.

"The premier doesn't understand the gravity of this kind of situation," he said.

Outside the legislature, he said the conflict exists if Inland wishes to purchase B.C. Hydro's natural gas operation at the "ridiculously low price" offered in 1974.

"This is the kind of crony and buddy network that we are dealing with," Lauk said.

The NDP member also said there is a special list of Social Credit lawyers who are to handle legal work for the insurance Corp. of B.C.

He said the insurance adjusters have been given the list on the understanding that only those select lawyers are to be called on by ICBC business.

"I think the Law Society of B.C. should be informed," Lauk said.

Toronto TV Bias Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — CBC television producers, except those who work in Toronto, called Friday for a Royal Commission to study domination of the English portion of the network by Toronto.

Don Williams of Winnipeg, national vice-president of the Association Des Realisateurs, a labor organization for producers outside Toronto, told a news conference Friday that the group wants more prime network time devoted to programs produced outside Toronto and wants more prime local time for locally-produced shows.

All decisions on allocation of CBC air time, whether for network shows or blocks of local time, are made at the corporation's Toronto headquarters and Williams said the CBC Toronto establishment looks upon regional producers as "poor country cousins."

He said the CBC is supposed to present a "national viewpoint," but "I'm not so sure we can have a national viewpoint."

Williams said there are many good actors outside Toronto, adding that the current health of Canadian theatre is largely due to the recent growth of quality regional theatre centres such as the Playhouse in Vancouver and the Manitoba Theatre Centre.

He said producers are not asking that the Toronto establishment be broken up, but many producers in Toronto would likely move back to the regions if there were good jobs available.

Boycott Planned

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Dissident Northern Interior egg producers Arnold Link and Cy Kovachich will meet with interior egg producers Monday in Vernon to discuss the producers' next move in the growing dispute with the B.C. Egg Marketing Board.

Egg producers from the northern area, the Okanagan and Kootenays, and producers from Vancouver Island, have banded together to seek what they say is a more democratic board representation.

Link said he will seek to persuade interior producers to begin a boycott of the marketing board which would result in a refusal to pay production levies.

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday was unable to determine the cause of an April 4 pleasure boat fire which killed Lucy Howe, 51, and Irene Moshanski, both of North Vancouver, in Indian Arm.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sharon Louise Dobson, of Richmond, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the March 15 rifle shooting death of her husband, was given a two-year suspended sentence Friday by British Columbia Supreme Court Justice H.E. Hutchison.

Court learned Gary Dobson had repeatedly beaten his wife and had on one occasion sent her to hospital with injuries.

Union Meetings Delay Presses

VANCOUVER (CP) — Production of the Sun and the Province was delayed Friday as union leaders held membership meetings on the floor of various departments in the Pacific Press Building.

The evening Sun was about two hours late and the morning Province was about 2½ hours late off the press.

Leaders of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, representing 1,400 workers at Pacific Press Ltd., without a contract since Oct. 31, rejected the latest offer from Pacific Press Ltd. which produces both newspapers.

The company offered involved lump sum payments to employees ranging up to $5,400 in return for eliminating restrictive work practices and accepting the transfer of people within departments so they don't lose jobs.

The company also offered a three-year contract with wage increases of slightly more than eight per cent, 7.6 per cent and six per cent during the term.

Dave MacIntyre, co-chairman of the joint council of six unions, accused the company of trying to "buy off restrictive practices" with the proposed lump sum payments.

He said Vander Zalm feeds into people who believe there are a lot of long-haired people in the 20s who are ripping off the welfare system.

Levi said Vander Zalm feeds into people who believe there are a lot of long-haired people in the 20s who are ripping off the welfare system.

He said the real problem is to find enough employers who will guarantee fairly permanent jobs for those on welfare.

Vander Zalm said his department estimates there are 23,500 employable on welfare.

He said the problem with previous employment programs was that they had no follow through to see that those found jobs remained employed for some time.

Welfare Rhetoric Altered

Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver Burrard) told the legislature Friday there is nothing new in the provincial government's welfare employment program except the reorganization.

He was commenting during debate on the spending estimates for Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's office, on the recently-announced Provincial Rehabilitation and Employment Program.

When he announced the program, Vander Zalm said he expected it would find jobs for 12,000 people now on welfare in three months.

Levi, human resources minister in the previous NDP government, said such employment programs for unemployed employables have always been in place. "What is new is the rhetoric."

He said Vander Zalm feeds into people who believe there are a lot of long-haired people in the 20s who are ripping off the welfare system.

Levi said a large majority of the unemployed employables find jobs and get off welfare so there is really only a small core who remain unemployed.

He said the real problem is to find enough employers who will guarantee fairly permanent jobs for those on welfare.

Vander Zalm said his department estimates there are 23,500 employable on welfare.

He said the problem with previous employment programs was that they had no follow through to see that those found jobs remained employed for some time.

B.C. STILL HOBBLED BY EXPORT SLOWDOWN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia economy is still hobbled by the problems that held it down in 1975 — double-digit inflation, uncertain world demand for major export products and labor-management disputes — Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday.

The budget-watching will develop in two ways: one through quarterly reporting of the province's finances; the other through the establishment of an auditor-general, he said. Ontario is the only Canadian province that now reports quarterly.

Dandruff Cure: Poop Treatment

TORONTO — A young woman claims a bird "poop treatment" has cured her of a chronic dandruff problem.

Olah Cap, 24, said Friday she's been free of dandruff since a mynah bird "relieved himself on my head" May 27. She said she was at her tennis club having lunch that day when the bird, belonging to another member, was let loose in the dining room.

"He landed on my head and everybody thought it was hilarious when they realized what the bird was doing," she said. "But I left him there, thinking it's got to have some nutritional value and he did it over and over again."

"I rubbed it into my hair and let it dry. Then I left it for about an hour before washing it out. I guess you could call it a 'poop treatment,' but it worked for me and I want first rights if anybody tries to bottle it."

Jean-Paul Bilodeau, of nearby Villeneuve, said in his provincial court motion he suffered prejudice because one of the three $1 million winning tickets went unsold.

Bilodeau said the draw violated anti-combines statutes concerning lotteries.

SCITUATE, Mass. — Alexander Peckham, 70, showed up for his granddaughter's high school graduation Friday just like he said he would.

Peckham arrived from Los Angeles Thursday after pedalling 3,000 miles across the country on his bike.

"I told my wife I'd get there before Lisa's graduation. And I made it," said Peckham. "It's kind of an ego trip, I guess."

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — Michael Van Adrichem of Prince George was re-elected president of the Canadian Catholic School Trustees Association during the association's annual meeting Friday.

Also re-elected were vice-

and John Boras of Lethbridge, Alta.

TORONTO — Canada's universities and colleges bear a major responsibility for the fact that students are graduating with training in fields where there are few jobs, Robert Andras, minister of manpower and immigration, said Friday.

Speaking at the convocation ceremonies at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, Andras said the institutions often ignore the future employment situation and "encourage high enrolments in skills and professions without judging the consequences in terms of demand."

REPORTER THREATENED

OTTAWA (CP) — City police have confirmed that CBC reporter Don McNeill's life was threatened by a masked man who entered the reporter's Ottawa apartment Friday afternoon.

Insp. Carl Norton said the man made the threat through McNeill's cleaning woman, who was in the apartment when the intruder entered through an open door.

Insp. Norton said the intruder told the cleaning woman, that he would kill McNeil if caught by police.

McNeill said in an interview the intruder told the woman: "you tell this guy if the cops get me, he's dead."

$12.5M SAVED REVEREND REX

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Rev. Rex Humbard has wiped out the $12.5 million debt charged against his Cathedral of Tomorrow for illegal sale of securities largely through the contributions of his followers, common pleads Judge Paul Riley ruled Friday.

Riley, visiting from Clinton County, signed a journal entry which said $12,429,390 had been deposited in a Columbus bank for disbursement to 4,000 investors in line with a state ruling.

The state said the cathedral sold the illegal securities in 1972. Riley has overseen a four-year reorganization plan under which Humbard's cathedral operated while the money was raised.

Humbard raised part of the money through letters which said:

"Many of you in the last few days have been reading in your newspapers and national magazines all kinds of stories about this ministry.

The affordable home...and how we're helping it happen.

1 A plan to make owning a home possible for more people.

This one's for you. It's called AHOP (The Assisted Home Ownership Program), and it combines the federal assistance provided by CMHC (Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation) with additional assistance from the B.C. Government.

Very simply, here's how it works:

If you're a two-person household and want to buy or build a house, and the price is within the established AHOP price limits for the area, you can qualify for the CMHC Interest Reduction Loan. This loan acts to reduce the mortgage rate to 8%, and is interest-free for the support period.

That's only the first part. The second part is a CMHC subsidy of up to $750 for the first year. You're eligible if you've applied for the maximum Interest Reduction Loan; have at least one dependent child; and even with the loan, your monthly payments exceed 25% of your income.

Now here's the extra bonus from us. If you've qualified for the above CMHC subsidy, and your monthly payments are still more than 30% of your income, you qualify for an additional subsidy of up to $750.

Add it all up, and it means that the possibility of home-ownership is greatly extended, and now includes families in B.C. with incomes below $10,000 a year.

British Columbia
Department of Housing
Hon. Hugh A. Curtis, Minister.

2 A plan to encourage more efficient use of land for affordable housing.

This one's for the municipalities. And you. You may benefit from the resulting reduced municipal taxes and/or increased services. It's called MIGP (Municipal Incentive Grant Program), and it's designed to encourage the development of affordable housing and the more efficient use of land.

There are two grants available to municipalities and regional districts. The first is a $1,000 grant from CMHC. The second is a $500 grant from us. That means the total grant per eligible unit is $1,500. To be eligible, the proposed housing units must be constructed for permanent residency, be connected to municipal piped water and sewage systems, and be served with roads having at least gravel surface.

These are the basic qualifications. There are others that apply to density, size and value requirements. What they all add up to for you is growing communities with more affordable housing for more people.

Now here's the extra bonus from us. If you've qualified for the above CMHC subsidy, and your monthly payments are still more than 30% of your income, you qualify for an additional subsidy of up to $750.

Add it all up, and it means that the possibility of home-ownership is greatly extended, and now includes families in B.C. with incomes below $10,000 a year.

3 A plan to make more rental housing available.

This one's for the builders. And you. You benefit because it creates a more adequate supply of rental housing.

It's called ARP (Assisted Rental Program), and it's designed to stimulate private investors to once again invest funds in affordable rental housing. The incentive is for the builder... but the benefits are passed on to you. A prototype of this program resulted in 2,000 new rental units started on Vancouver Island last year.

The amount of assistance available to the builder depends on the number of units in the project, the construction cost, the mortgage interest rate, operating costs, and prevailing rents.

It starts with a $600 grant per unit from us in the first year. If this grant is not sufficient to allow the builder to charge normal market rents and maintain an agreed-upon return rate on his equity, an assistance loan of $1,200 per unit is available from CMHC. If either or both of the above still leave the builder below the agreed return rate on equity, a conditional $1,200 interest-free loan per unit is available from the province.

The agreement establishes initial rental rates. After that, rents are set by market conditions, but any higher net revenues derived go towards reducing the amount of assistance.

Basically, what it all means is more rental housing available at more reasonable rates.

If you want a home,
we want to help.

Opener frames inventor de la Hitte

Aristocratic Inventor

Eight Years of Work Leads to Unique Opener

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A French aristocrat living in Victoria has invented something that should make housewives and the elderly purr with gratitude — a handy jar and bottle opener.

Count Rodolphe Valepy de la Hitte, a direct descendant of the great Charlemagne, has spent the past eight years perfecting the instrument and securing patents in Canada, the U.S., and Japan.

Working in the basement of an apartment at 385 Michigan where he and his wife, the Countess, share an upstairs suite with a friend, the Count has made about a dozen of the pear-shaped openers. Each was cut from a sheet of stainless steel then fastidiously hand-filed — 50 hours of painstaking labor per opener. One, a prototype for a plastic model, was made out of wood.

Ill health forced him to halt production about 1½ years ago, but his mind is still alert to the possibilities of his invention . . . if only he can find a manufacturer.

A prospectus describing the opener has been sent to selected companies in North America by a New York promotional firm, Raymond Lee Promotional Ltd.

Last month de la Hitte received replies from two large corporations, Sunbeam and Echo. Both turned down the offer to mass produce the device under direct sale of license of the patent. Neither indicated any reason for rejection.

But that's not enough to discourage the Count, who says he's been an inventor for most of his long life.

Born in Hastings, England, before the turn of the century — the date isn't important, he says emphatically — de la Hitte grew up in Britain, Belgium and the south of France where his father had a mine high in the Pyrenees. Close by was the family chateau in the province of Gers, near the town of Auch, 50 miles from the Spanish border, home to the de la Hittes for more than thousand years.

Today, he says, a cousin manages the estate comprising vineyards and four mixed farms.

He became count on the death of his father. He was seven at the time; his father, 37.

He served in both world wars as a French soldier. During the Second World War he was active in the resistance movement in southern France helping downed allied fliers escape into Spain. It was not without enormous risk. He says he discovered later his name was on the Gestapo list.

Between wars he was employed with a French road-building firm and in 1936 devised a machine that produced stable tar emulsions, vital for effective road laying. The invention caught the eye of his employer who promptly recalled him to head office in Paris and promoted him to inspector of roads for the company. His new position took him throughout Europe.

The machine, he says, is still in operation in the company's several tar plants in France. It is, he adds, his most successful invention to date.

Between wars also he met and married his first cousin, Veronique.

Calgary-born, she had gone to France in 1930 on a holiday.

The couple had one child, Helen, who became a film director and sometime actress in Hollywood before moving to Victoria where she and her family now reside.

The de la Hittes left France in 1946 coming to Victoria where the Countess's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tristan White, lived in a house at 25 Chambers.

He says when he landed he had only $14 in his pocket, the family fortunes lost during the war years.

The couple opened a tea house in Royal Oak and then in 1959 he joined the city works department as inspector of Victoria streets. He retired in 1958.

Throughout his life, he says, he's had more than a passing interest in things mechanical.

When he was 16 he invented a new phonograph needle and diaphragm, made of hardened wood.

But the steel and then diamond needles came on the market shortly after bringing an end to that idea.

In 1948 he developed a fluid differential gear for heavy equipment which he feels would have revolutionized the motor industry had it not proved too difficult to service and thus too costly.

In the mid-50s he devised a machine for plastic tubes. He says an American toothpaste company copied the idea and used it in one of its products. He didn't get a cent in royalties.

Then came the jar and bottle opener, inspired, he says, by the common dilemma housewives face in opening tightly sealed jars.

Although his body is energized by old age his mind is still fertile with ideas.

But he's too much of a pragmatist to pin his hopes too high.

"I've never been overly enthusiastic about any of my inventions," the Count says. "I've been through it all so many times before."

"I've had one big success . . . the first, well, they come like bad dreams that fade away in the morning."

Sooke Spotlighted In Building Surge

They're busy building in Sooke, so busy a regional building inspector is working full time there now.

In the past an inspector from the Langford office spent only three days a week in the Sooke area but the surge in construction has changed that.

In fact, building permit figures for April show Sooke far ahead of the other six electoral areas in the Capital district. For that month, value of building permits in Sooke was

$1,638,000, with Salt Spring Island second at $705,000 and Langford third at $531,000.

That was an exceptional month for Sooke. But totals for the first four months of the year still have it in second place at $4,556,000, behind only Langford at $4,826,000.

Salt Spring Island is third at $2,282,000 and Colwood fourth at $1,275,000.

The April permits for Sooke include 19 for single family dwellings, three for duplexes and three for multiple family buildings with a total of 46 units.

For the people having business with building inspector Brian Anderson, he is in his office at 6993 Sooke Rd. from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Mondays and Fridays and from 1 to 2 p.m. Monday and Wednesday. The rest of the time he will be making on-site inspections in the Sooke area.

The office is open to 4:30 p.m. weekdays, where building inspection application forms are available.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me what the Western Canada lottery profits are spent on? G.S.

A. Profits go to the partner provinces — B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba — on a division related to ticket sales in each, says director John Stewart. In B.C., then, a committee decides division of the money to three funds which are in effect provincial government trusts — the B.C. Cultural Fund, the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund and the B.C. Special Events Fund.

The lottery foundation published last month an ad in daily newspapers which details where the money goes, Stewart says.

Seal Kill Sparks American Boycott

The tourist industry in Greater Victoria could be dealt a heavy blow by thousands of Americans who have pledged to boycott Canada until the annual east coast seal slaughter is stopped.

The prospectus has tourist industry spokesman worried and at least one local MP will be asked to air it in Ottawa.

Word of the boycott comes in a letter to the Times from Portland lawyer Roger Tilbury.

"More than 5,000 people in Portland alone have now signed pledges that they will not visit Canada, or purchase Canadian products, until your government puts an end to the diabolical practice of the clubbing of immature baby harp seals on the front ice of Labrador and Newfoundland," he writes.

This year's kill, mainly by Newfoundlanders and Norwegians, numbered 127,000 and Tilbury said some studies indicate the seal herd will be wiped out in seven to 10 years.

He said Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc has so far ignored pleas from more than 27 million people that "this barbarism be stopped."

The American lawyer said that since polite diplomacy has failed to move the Canadian government, "a number of us have decided that more direct action is the only option left . . .

"We have deep regret that it was necessary to undertake this boycott. My wife and I have visited Canada each of the past 10 years. We thoroughly enjoy Canada — especially Victoria and Vancouver.

"We also realize that if enough people sign these petitions, and hundreds of thousands of our citizens do not

CAR VICTIM STILL 'POOR'

Willard Kenneth Pelkey, 26, of 2753 Beach Road, is still in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital after being struck by a Saanich police car Friday on Douglas Street opposite the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

The accident occurred at about 1:56 a.m. when police said Pelkey walked into the path of the car driven by Constable Lawrence Knox. Pelkey received head and leg injuries.

Wayne Edwin Young, 50, of Allandale, Colwood, is in fair condition in the same hospital after his car hit a tree alongside Metchosin Road Friday night. He received a fractured pelvis and cuts.

Two More Homes Ready to Tumble

A little more of old Victoria will vanish Monday when wreckers tear down two old homes at 1029 and 1033 Burdett Avenue to make room for construction of a large condominium.

With the U.S. bicentennial, the Olympics in Montreal, higher ferry rates and potential labor problems, the local tourist industry is in for a tough year without a boycott, he said.

Brian Small, manager of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said the executive will make a decision on the boycott threat at Wednesday's meeting. He has also received letters warning of it.

"I'm sorry to see them go," Reeve said. "They are certainly more pleasing to the eye than a condominium."

He said "scavengers" moved in this morning to grab fixtures.

"I have never seen so many scavengers descend all at once upon a house," he said.

"They must have got permission from the owner."

Further down the avenue, a heritage home owned by the Sisters of St. Ann, is also scheduled to be demolished.

The dwelling at 913 Burdett was designed by one of Victoria's pioneer builders of quality homes, Sam MacLure.

An effort was made to prevent the home from being torn down, but city council decided it had no legal authority to prevent its demolition.

Brother Act 'Took a Long Time to Sink Through'

Apprehension crept into the mind of Leonard Soule as the Air Canada jet taxied to a stop on the runway at Victoria's International Airport.

Would he remember? What would it be like after all this time?

Next to him, his wife Helene and their lanky son Ronald played a sort of guessing game, trying to pick which was Leonard Soule's brother as the passengers filed off the plane.

Apprehension, confusion, at a family reunion?

Well, it's understandable.

Neither Helene nor Ronald had ever seen Ernest Soule and Leonard was meeting his brother for the first time in 40 years!

It was, Ernest admits now, all a little comical. Helene and Ronald both picked different people — and neither of those was the right one.

"But they won't tell me what kind of person they picked," laughs Ernest.

Says Helene: "Well, you're much better looking and younger looking than the ones we picked out."

And Ronald confesses: "I picked a guy about the same size, only with a goatee and more European-looking."

Despite the early apprehension, Leonard was the only one who didn't have any trouble.

"But he really wanted to be a farmer," explains Ernest.

"So he took advantage of the government's resettlement plan for ex-patriates and got a little piece of land at Roberts Creek, near Gibsons on the Sunshine Coast. Len and I went to the little Elphinstone School there."

Their father, David Soule, was born in Guelph, Ontario, and married his English-born wife Violet during the First World War.

David Soule started out in life as a druggist but gave that up and worked on the construction of telegraph lines at Port Renfrew.

That was 1936 and it was then that the Soule family split up.

Lessons Send Chi Chi To Head of the Class

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez may have revived his golf career with a recent putting lesson from Hubert Green.

"I've been playing so bad for so long, the last seven or eight months I've been thinking about quitting the tour," said the graying Rodriguez, a 40-year-old veteran of the pro tour.

"I've made $20,000 in the last two years and spent $80,000," the 125-pound Puerto Rican said Friday.

"I hadn't broken 70 since the Crosby (four months ago) this year. Then I got a putting lesson from Hubert (a three-time winner and the season's leading money-winner) and a playing lesson from (fellow professional) Herman Keiser."

Rodriguez, who acquired the last of his seven tour titles in 1973, used that new putting knowledge to put together rounds of 69 and 68 for a 137 total that left him just one shot back of pace-setting rookie Tom Purtizer going into today's third round in the $200,000 Bicentennial golf tournament.

Purtizer, who holed six putts of 15 feet or more in his first round, didn't make anything longer than eight feet in his round of par 71 Friday on the 6,687-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course and three punted twice.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a 71 for a two-round total of 144, eight strokes back of the leader. Gar Hamilton of Toronto shot a 74 after an opening-round 76 for a 150 total and failed to make the cut.

$50,000 Gift Opens Earth Fund

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Maurice Strong—president of Petro-Canada—announced Friday for the creation of a private international “earth fund” and donated his $50,000 environmental award as seed money to get the program started.

Described as the No. 1 friend of the environment in the UN, Strong accepted the first international Pahlavi environmental prize at a ceremony at UN headquarters.

The award was given for his work as secretary-general of the 1972 Stockholm UN Conference on the Environment, which set the wheels in motion for several of today's UN programs. Strong also was the first executive director of the four-year UN Environment Program (UNEP).

Strong left the UN post last Jan. 1 to head Petro-Canada, the federal government-owned oil company.

Prince Abdorreza Pahlavi—the chief Iranian delegate who presented the award—said Strong's name has become synonymous with world environment. The Iranian government provides funds for the annual Pahlavi prize through the UN, and Strong is its first recipient. Speaking as a private citizen, Strong said he might be far more critical of the failure of government the way they should be doing.

The environmental movement is confronted with a crisis so grave that it threatens all the progress that it has made,” Strong told UN delegates.

“Our present patterns of growth and development are destroying and undermining the resource base and biospheric balance on which our future life and well-being depend and cannot be sustained for any long period of time.”

He said it will require “nothing less than a revolution in our attitudes” toward the growth of technology.

The atmosphere, water, soil, plant and animal life must be valued as the most important and vital part of society's essential natural capital.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadas should spend $100 million a year for the next 10 years to help provide clean water in all communities throughout the world, says a group that is acting as watchdog on the Canadian delegation at Habitat.

Trevor Lloyd, a McGill University geography professor, said at a news conference Friday that the funds for clean water could be taken from the existing budget of the Canadian International Development Agency.

The Habitat observer team, a group of professors that is keeping a careful eye on the performance of the Canadian delegation at the United Nations conference here, said in a statement that not enough attention is paid to water quality in the Canadian background documents.

Margaret Trudeau, the prime minister's wife, is to lead a walk Sunday to Habitat forum, the unofficial parallel conference here, with marchers carrying buckets of water as many people must do throughout the world.

Efficient Auto Runs on Crystals

NAMIC principles of the old Stirling engines, such as the hot air engines. However, his version uses the crystals which can be melted overnight from house electricity.

He said the crystals melt at around 850 degrees, and have the advantage of locking up or releasing large amounts of energy in the process of melting or solidifying.

The molten crystals are used to heat gases that are passed into the engine. But the process can be reversed. The engine can be used in a vehicle for braking, and the energy created in slowing or stopping can be fed back into the crystal reservoir.

HYPOCRISY, SAYS WOMAN

Criticism Of Forum 'Valid'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Al Clapp, the man who was in charge of the physical preparations for Habitat Forum, said Friday that criticisms of the forum site by participating non-governmental organizations are valid.

Clapp said at a news conference that the work force at the reconverted seaplane base had run out of energy during the past few days and as a result some things were not completely satisfactory to conference delegates.

He said the main criticism about transport has been resolved, with British Columbia Hydro buses now picking up and unloading passengers at the front gate, rather than several hundred yards away.

Clapp said, however, that there is no solution to the complaints about the cold endured in the converted hangar.

“If delegates are feeling a little discomfort, it may bring their minds a little closer to what they are discussing,” he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — How hypocritical to hold a conference on the problems of human habitation “when the very persons who spend their lives within the basic structures of the home are... virtually excluded at every level of decision-making.” Lisa Hobbs, Vancouver Sun associate editor, said Thursday.

“Out of the 500 or so of our delegates here, there are only about 35 women delegates,” she said.

Mrs. Hobbs, Rosemary Brown, a member of the provincial legislature, and Lynn Hosken, a U.S. architect, introduced at a Habitat Forum program as “heavy-duty ladies” by Judge Nancy Morrison of Vancouver, criticized women's lack of representation in the planning of settlements.

Named to Board

MONTREAL (CP) — Patrick J. J. Rich of Montreal has been elected a member of the board of directors of Alcan Aluminum Ltd., succeeding the late Dr. John J. Deutsch. Rich is regional vice president of Alcan for Europe, U.K., Africa and Latin America.

HABITAT '76

Thorny Issues Worded To Appear All Sides

U.S. KEEPS EYES ON POLITICAL PLOYS

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The U.S. delegation attending the United Nations conference on human settlements has warned against political issues dominating the conference.

Russell Peterson, acting head of the delegation, said Friday night the U.S. group was “keeping a sharp eye out” for issues being injected into the conference which conflict with U.S. policy.

Peter said the amendment proposed by Iraq was not an oversight.

Canada Slammed On Land Stand

VANCOUVER (CP) — After attacking the Canadian stand on land at the Habitat conference, a Habitat observer team member Friday urged a progressive tax to break up “oligopoly control” of the land market.

Michael Goldberg, an economics professor at the University of British Columbia, said after an observer team news conference that big landholders should have to pay more per acre in taxes than smaller landholders.

This might lead to a greater number of people owning land and stimulate competition in land development, he said. The Canadian attempt to change a draft UN resolution on land profits is incomprehensible, he said. The delegation position was unacceptable to all groups in Canadian society.

The habitat observer team is a group of university professors who have banded together to keep a critical eye on the Canadian performance at the conference and speak out publicly on these issues.

The draft UN resolution which the Canadian delegation is trying to change says that “the plus value resulting from change in use of land or from public investment must be recaptured by the community.”

The problem of wording was apparent in a committee study of energy initiatives Friday when Papua New Guinea proposed an amendment calling for the limitation of energy technologies known to be potentially hazardous, including nuclear power.

The resolution that finally received committee approval dropped the specific reference to nuclear power after several countries said nuclear power had not been discussed in earlier preparatory sessions.

Slum Move Protested

MANILA (UPI) — Police arrested 2,000 of 5,000 slum dwellers and religious leaders who held a demonstration today timed to coincide with the Habitat conference in Vancouver.

Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos, who is accompanying president Ferdinand Marcos on an official visit to the Soviet Union, was scheduled to fly Sunday to Vancouver to attend the 12-day conference.

A police official said 14 buses with a capacity of from 100 to 150 persons carried the arrested demonstrators to a suburban military camp.

Demonstrations are banned under President Marcos' martial law proclaimed in a national emergency.

The slum dwellers, led by squatter groups from Manila's tough slum district of Tondo, had gathered in front of the Manila Cathedral shortly before noon but were prevented from holding the demonstration by uniformed and plainclothes police armed with truncheons.

A pamphlet distributed by churchmen protested government moves to turn Manila “into a beautiful metropolis at the expense of suffering poor.”

The pamphlet was highly critical of a settlement program for 500 squatter families on 15 acres of reclaimed land on Manila Bay adjacent to Tondo. Rents of $10-$14 in the new project would be too expensive for squatters, the protesters said.

The demonstrators said they hoped slum dwellers would be given a voice in the Habitat conference in Vancouver.

Mrs. Marcos is governor of metropolitan Manila, which has a population of 7 million, one-third of whom are squatters.

Las Vegas' great orgy

LAS VEGAS — Places everyone, it's showtime. Lower the lights. Music, maestro. Bring on the dancing girls.

Act II of The Great Orgy will begin shortly.

Ushered in, last Thursday with smoke, roses, champagne and caviar, the party came to a temporary standstill on Friday.

The intermission was called while crowds dispersed to make way for an entire new cast of reviewers which will arrive this week. The new group will join the bacchanal this Thursday and Friday while last week's crowd remains in seclusion in recovery rooms.

Promoted as the most lavish party in Las Vegas history, the two-act celebration is being held in honor of the Aladdin Hotel's $60-million expansion program.

Partying got under way Thursday after a genre—a voluptuous female genie—popped out of a nine-foot-high fiberglass pamp—it was spewing smoke—and snipped a ribbon woven of $1,000 bills with a pair of jeweled scissors.

Old P. T. Barnum would have doffed his hat in awe of the act. After that, though, it was the same old script: wine, women and song.

While hundreds of guests gathered in the Grand Ballroom, Vesuvius began erupting, champagne bubbled from a magnificent cauldron near the Eiffel Tower and Bob Crosby struck up the band.

Throughout the ballroom the scent of Shalimar perfume, myrrh and incense assailed the crowd.

Not since a press agent served martinis from a cement mixer several years ago has Las Vegas been as intoxicated with itself. Before the last spoonful of caviar is consumed next Friday, the bill for the elaborate bacchanal will have soared past the $1-million mark.

The liquor alone figures out to $100,000.

Where else but Las Vegas?

Add to this another $100,000 in silver medallions which the hotel is presenting to each of its 2,000 guests and you begin to understand why one press agent described it as "soiree to end all soirees."

Food for the continuing orgy was flown from Switzerland, Russia, Hungary, France, England, Mexico and Japan.

In the ballroom it is being served from half a dozen pavilions—French and Italian, Russian and Swiss and Arab and Israeli.

In the make-believe world of Las Vegas, even the Arabs and the Israelis are on expansion program.

Last week, while guests moved from pavilion to pavilion, slave girls sprinkled rose petals in their paths, background music was provided by Sacha's Strolling Violins and belly dancers gyrated alongside tables.

There were magicians, astrologers, singers and a dozen genies.

Everyone showed up but a snake charmer.

It was like a scene out of the Arabian Nights, only with slot machines and dice tables.

Finally the curtain of Act I fell Friday evening. It will rise on Act II Thursday night when another 1,000 guests parade into town.

Before showtime got under way last week, press agent Lee Fisher, bedeviled with doubts, toured the hotel.

With workmen still pounding and plastering, he strolled into the Bagdad Theatre.

Aimlessly, he wandered into the casino. It was crowded with players. Some were hard hats.

"The plaster keeps falling in their hair," Fisher explained. "It's those damned jackhammers." He shrugged.

"But the gamblers won't quit."

That's why he passed out the hats.

Fisher was pensive. He'd invited President Ford, but reporters were wired by Washington. The invitation was also declined by Queen Elizabeth, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, the president of Mexico, the Emperor of Japan, the Russian ambassador and an assortment of other world and political figures.

Besides this, he'd wanted to give away a $10,000 bill and the management turned him down.

He'd figured, too, on a balalaika, a gypsy violinist, a French horn soloist and a mariachi band but manager John Abraham gave Bob Crosby the nod instead.

Sign of the Angel charming inn

The Cotswolds, England — We are in England's West Country! These are the Cotswold Hills. The prettiest villages with nursery school names — you want to write out of every one of them just for the datelines:

Stow-on-Wold, Bourton-on-the-Water, Chipping Sodbury, Little Sodbury, Chipping Camden, Chipping Norton, Upper and Lower Swell.

Upper and Lower Slaughter, Upper Lip, Birdlip, Great Badminton, Little Badminton, End of Badminton.

A small Cotswold village comes equipped with a fine "wool" church. Now in spring, little woolly Cotswold lambs are running through the green fields. Then back to their woolly mammas, as all good little lambs should.

The fat, woolly Cotswold sheep made 15th and 16th century sheppowers fat and rich. They built the steeped wool churches you see all through these rolling Cotswold Hills.

The Sign of the Angel is in Lacock. It dates from 1450 when the main road between Bath and London ran through here. A coaching inn with room for a dozen tired travelers. (There were no sightseeing tours in those wonderful days.)

We got into Lacock village at tea time. The Sign of the Angel has mulioned windows. Yellow Cotswold stone. Roses climb over the half-timbered building.

The cobblestone entrance was sudsy and slippery. Freshly scrubbed with a wire brush. A hand-lettered sign tacked to the inn door reads: "If you let me dog our accidentally, please ring so we might try to retrieve him. The dog is quite old and requires attention. Thank you for being kind."

John Lewis meets you wiping his hands on his apron. He looks like he just came off a Toby mug shelf. Pink face, Angelic smile. A circle of snowy white hair. He and his wife, Frances, do all the cooking.

Came home in the chill early evening after a walk in the village.

Applewood fire-burning in the great stone fireplace. Smell of roast pork crackling on the spit. The dining room was candlelit, and we drank hard cider from the inn's apple trees that put you into heavenly orbit.

For dinner: Bubbling leek soup, Roast pork with succulent crackling. Vegetables from the garden crusted with English cheddar. Fine wines. Home-made ice cream with fat shaving of dark Dutch chocolate.

In two weeks of living, I've got it marked: "Best meal we've had in England."

crazy. Other prices pretty well match. You'll only spin the tread off your tires.

Smile Show Spruced Up

Some long-time favorites are back in the action; there are reunions and infusions of new promising people. The fire has been lit, the steam is up and the calliope is on its way.

It's the 24th annual and it will open at McPherson Playhouse July 3 and play there for the ensuing two months.

Besides the unquenchable veterans, Gosley and accordionist Al Denoni, Al's lovely talented wife, Lana Cheek will again be lead male dancer and some of the show's comedy will once more be vested in impressionist Steve Ivings.

Multi-talented Hosie returns to the show after a six-year absence and singer Clare Wynters, who took last summer off, will be back with song stylings.

A long time friend of Jerry, music hall comedy artist Art Budd will be making his first appearance in the Smile Show. Other newcomers are comedian Derek Muir and in the kick line, dancers Sheila McCarthy and Debra Carlson.

Bebe Eversfield is again in the director's chair and Anton Gosley will be supervising design and acting as stage manager.

Tickets for the popular show went on sale today at McPherson box office.

JOE COCKER STRIKES OUT

ROLLING STONE

By DAVE MARSH

JOE COCKER: "Stingray"
(A and M SP 4574.)

the time and confidence he needs to relocate his talent, or at least, his charm.

IAN MATHEWS: "Go for Broke" (Columbia PC 34102).

Joe Cocker was once among the finest white R and B singers. Guitarists Cornell Dupree and Eric Gale, bassist Gordon Edwards, drummer Steve Gadd and keyboard player Richard Tee still are among the finest soul session players in the country. But teaming them hasn't paid off. The results of their collaboration aren't even lacklustre. The most interesting track here, Bob Dylan's ode to Catfish Hunter, may be the worst thing Dylan ever wrote — it's certainly among the most tedious Cocker has ever recorded. Lack of direction from producer Rob Fraboni (or anyone else), weak material and the fact that Cocker's voice is only a fragment of what it once was combine to make this the first of his records without at least one good song.

A symphony conductor might not be a practical man in terms of apparel or appliance merchandising or insurance adjusting, but for decisions on what sort of symphony hall to build and what it should contain as well as what could least harmfully be eliminated for economy, he's the one most practical man you could find.

arts organizations, however, for which the artists themselves are not spokesmen as a rule, can be slow or remiss on practical matters.

There is evidence of this in a recent Canada Council address by director Charles Lussier to the annual conference of the Canadian Music Council at Guelph, when he administered a quiet but unmistakable rap over the knuckles to some 400 Canadian arts organizations for neglecting to protest to the prime minister over the effects on the arts of the present austerity program.

He told his audience that the Council-supported organizations had been warned by Council of the restrictions on grants for the coming year.

"But to our knowledge," he said, "only one — the Globe Theatre in Regina — protested to the P.M."

He pointed out the government has no automatic pipeline of information from the arts world and if artists expect informed advice from government it is up to them and their friends to do the informing.

Lussier made it clear, in this address and a previous one given in Toronto, that Canada Council is deeply concerned about the present financial situation's impact on the arts and is anxious to "rally the ranks" to ride out the storm.

He feels there is little likelihood governments for the present will find it possible to increase their support of the arts at a rate consistent with expected needs.

"I think, however, that they can be persuaded to make greater efforts in this direction ... if there is more vigorous lobbying by artists and arts administrators themselves. We are looking anxiously for this kind of action," he said.

The title song and hit single is annoying, but compared to the rest of the album, it's as good as "Do You Believe in Magic?" Despite a couple of remodeled Lovin' Spoonful songs, Sebastian's comeback is a thorough disappointment. Hopefully, the success of the TV theme will give Sebastian Brown-Eyed Girl" he might have bit off more than anyone could be reasonably expected to chew. His originals are weaker, but not that much.

TERRY REID: "Seed of Memory" (ABC ABCD 833).

On a couple of 1968-69 era albums, Terry Reid was a classic blues-based rock and roll singer, good enough to earn himself a spot opening for the Rolling Stones on their first American comeback tour. Personal problems intervened, and he's made only one record since. This is the second, and although his voice is as affectingly gravelly as ever, Graham Nash has set it in thoroughly inappropriate country-rock and folk-rock settings. Give this kid another chance to shout, and he could do something really great.

Lussier made it clear, in this address and a previous one given in Toronto, that Canada Council is deeply concerned about the present financial situation's impact on the arts and is anxious to "rally the ranks" to ride out the storm.

"I think, however, that they can be persuaded to make greater efforts in this direction ... if there is more vigorous lobbying by artists and arts administrators themselves. We are looking anxiously for this kind of action," he said.

The event will take place Wednesday at 8 p.m. at St. Matthias Hall, corner of Richmond and Richardson.

Featured on the program will be the Victoria Conservatory Choir directed by Gladys Pearce, and pianist Walter Prossnitz, who will play a group of solos including the Chopin Etude Op. 25, No. 6; Debussy's Submerged Cathedral, and Toccata by Prokofieff.

Outstanding young violinist Mark Neumann, with Susan de Burgh at the piano, will play Gypsy Airs by Sarasate, and with violinist David Lowe and pianist Anna Lowe, the Sarasate duet, Navarra.

Pianist Sandra Hunt will appear as a soloist and also in combination with the flutist Rod Sherman and with cellist Rolf Gilstein.

Vocal soloists will include Valerie Archibald, Carmen Gozden, Patricia Chan and Morag Martin.

Following the program a coffee party will be held. The affair is open to the public and tickets will be available at the door. Proceeds will be devoted to the BFW Club scholarship fund.

'BLACK MOON'Mixed-Up Malle

A blond child-woman scrambles through the underbrush listening to the distant rattle of automatic rifles, and the screams of prisoners. She stops for a moment to examine an extravagantly colored praying mantis resting on a leaf, and becomes aware of a unicorn, watching her intently.

A black moon, astrologers say, signals a period of chaos and cataclysmic change from which a new order will emerge. Louis Malle's Black Moon projects us into a surreal future where war rages between men and women, where flowers shriek and pigs talk, and where your view of reality is altered, depending upon which window you look through.

Malle's future-world is a pecular Wonderland, and the child-woman (Cathryn Harrison, Rex's granddaughter) is an Alice-figure, a dream-child who is as stubborn, as nosy, and as wilful as the Lewis Carroll original. She rents and, as in a succession of dreams, the rules are constantly changing.

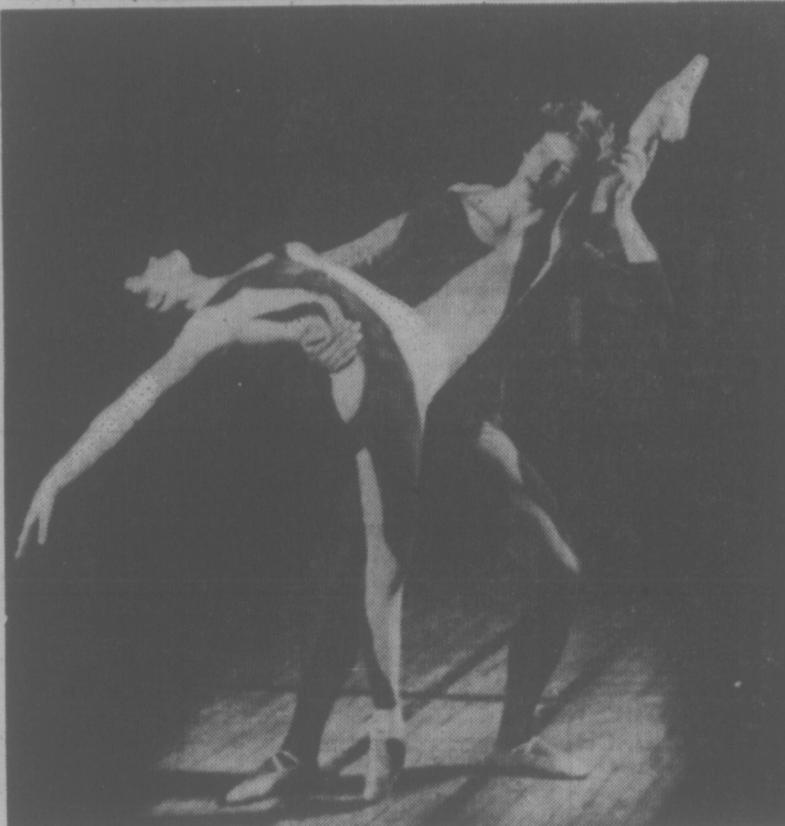

Black Moon is a film about a journey of discovery, a voyage from a charred and gun-grey society at war with itself to a fairy-tale land where all forms of life appear to have equal value. There the dream-child discovers that the definitions of good and evil will vary, depending upon the beholder.

Malle keeps us as puzzled as the girl whilst he ushers her through sequences of humor and Gothic horror. Apparently he wants us to "experience" these adventures rather than theorize about them and he discourages our attempts to rationalize this other world by confusing our understandings of the signs.

"A GREAT FATHER'S DAY GIFT"

The opening 20 minutes are a carefully ordered introduction to the alien environment. Malle turns it into a long chase sequence in which the girl flees the forces of war, first in a tiny, orange car, and then on foot, through an autumnal countryside until she finds a refuge of sorts in an old farm house. With the exception of a few crying flowers (a mistake destined to embarrass Malle for years, I think), and some doomsday chatter on the car radio, there are no other sounds but the booming of artillery. Then, as Malle introduces voice and more environmental noises, they are amplified and post-synchronized so as to take on the bizarre qualities of dream sounds.

The country house itself provides an odd sanctuary, and there is little there for the girl to take comfort in—a pig in a chair expresses displeasure when she drinks from his glass of milk; an old, bed-ridden woman alternately smacks and fondles her; and the other adult occupants of the house—a handsome, twin-like brother and sister (Joe Dalleandro and Alexandra Stewart) communicate only by touch. She welcomes the unicorn (a fat pony with a horn strapped on its head) who appears and disappears disconcertingly, but she is disengaged by his puzzling and insulating speeches.

Gradually, the logic of life inside the farm house begins to impose itself on the girl. The mechanized outer-world, characterized by short-wave radio transmissions offering news items from the Trojan War, is seen as inferior to this country life where pigs, naked children, and a talking rat-named Humphrey have an equal share at the table. As the adults disappear, or are cast out, the girl bares her breast for the unicorn and waits to become the mistress of his kingdom.

Malle's film is not entirely satisfactory as surreal fantasy—maybe because he doesn't know how to be a fantasist, or perhaps it's because there doesn't seem to be any particular value to the vision that he's trying to work out. Black Moon does have some surprising moments of wit and imagination; I just wish he didn't feel he had to outdo Luis Bunuel or Andy Warhol.

Y camp open house on Sunday

Activities start in July

The YM - YWCA's Camp Thunderbird will hold open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at the campsite on Glinz Lake near Sooke.

Prospective campers, parents and friends will visit the site to see where eight-to-15-year-olds will be swimming, hiking and taking part in other activities between July 4 and Aug. 21.

Camp Thunderbird dates back to 1906 but not at its present site. Its location varied from year to year between Goldstream and Patricia Bay.

Signs will be posted Sunday on Sooke Road to mark the turnoff for the camp.

Camp Thunderbird comprises 1,000 acres of rolling, wooded country in the Sooke Hills where campers take excursions to develop campcraft skills.

Mother Teresa's message simple but soul-stirring

There is no ego. There seems to be no flesh. Just the message "Let us love until it hurts."

The crowd of almost 2,000 people at Habitat Forum at Jericho Beach in Vancouver this week began to murmur and applaud as the small, slight figure entered Plenary Hall.

The intense eyes in the weatherbeaten face took in the crowd and then Mother Teresa of Calcutta said: "Let us say a prayer for our brothers and sisters around the world."

The prayer was simple but powerful. "Make us worthy, Lord, to serve our fellow men throughout the world. . . . Give them their daily bread . . . give them peace and joy through understanding love."

The prayer over, the figure in the simple white sari turned to Christ's urging statement to "love one another as I have loved you, and the best way is by sharing what He has given to you and me."

The words were not new; God gave us His only Son. Jesus died for us. He made Himself the bread of life.

The unwanted, the unloved, the helpless, the homeless, the hopeless don't need our sympathy. They need our love and compassion.

"I have seen a small child eat a piece of bread crumb by crumb to make it last longer. I have seen a hungry child put a piece of bread aside for a sick father. I have seen a mother with eight children divide the rice she was given in half and give half to a hungry neighbor family."

It was a story of love, down-to-earth love.

A woman reporter from the Philippines said quietly in an aside: "I've heard all of this said before. The same words. But when she says them, it's different."

The crowded building was quiet in rapt attention except for the restless fretting of a child here and there. There were hundreds of glistening eyes.

"We need a life of prayer and sacrifice," the firm voice said. "It's not a waste of time. It's a living, loving action."

"Bring the bread to the hungry. Clothe the naked. Build a home for the homeless."

"We are here not to plan big things but to give until it hurts. You have the need in your own country. Love begins at home."

Being unwanted means great suffering, she said. There was the boy whose mother "pushed him out of the home" because he wore his hair long.

Touching on abortion she said that "when an unborn child has to be killed, this is very, very great poverty."

Many people are hurting but not from the lack of material things. "Deep down in the heart is a great pain. This can be removed with love and compassion."

There is a pause. The quiet crowd waits.

"The poor enrich us. We must experience this to understand, to love, to make them our own because they are our brothers and sisters. We have them all over the world."

By now one feels the presence of a saint. "I remember the beautiful smile on the face of a dying woman who was brought in from the street. Before she died she said 'Thank you.'

"She gave me a beautiful gift. She did not say 'I am dying, I am sick, I am naked.' She gave me more than I gave her."

Mother Teresa sees Christ in the face of the leper, the dying, the homeless, the alcoholic.

"I had a child die in my hands. I never felt so ashamed. The child died just for a glass of milk which you and I didn't give."

Aware of the criticism levelled at her work as only part of the answer she said "I'd rather we made mistakes in kindness than to withhold it."

She told of the work her Sisters of Charity do for 46,000 lepers. She told of a rehabilitation centre built with money given by the Pope.

"It means something is going into their lives because they feel they are somebody to somebody."

She asked the audience to "pray for our people around the world. They need our love and compassion. Pray for us, so we can keep on doing God's work together."

"Together we are doing something beautiful for God."

Jordan and other countries as well.

When she finished talking at Habitat Forum Monday afternoon she sat down to answer questions. A spotlight shone on her white headdress and the small figure stood out as the brightest spot in the large building that used to be an airplane hangar.

Unity message

Love is my God, life is my religion, humanity is my church, loving my neighbor as myself is my daily worship.

This is the philosophy of a husband and wife team — Rev. Sig and Rev. Janie Paulson — of Unity Village Chapel at Unity's international headquarters in Missouri. The Paulsons will speak at Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort, at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Their subject: to Humanity With Love.

Siamese Twins Born

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — At least two days of tests will be needed to determine whether Siamese twin boys, born Friday, share any vital organs, hospital officials say. It is too early to know whether surgery can separate them.

Their condition was described Friday night as critical but stable.

The twins, joined at the abdomen and weighing 10 pounds, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gary Bongiorni of Thayer, Kan.

The twins were delivered by a cesarean section. The mother, Myla, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Siamese twins are a phenomenon averaging about one in every 50,000 births, doctors estimate, and have been successfully separated only about 20 times in medical history.

$250,000 TRESPASS SUIT AGAINST CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System has been ordered to pay a record $250,000 in punitive damages to an exclusive mid-Manhattan restaurant for trespass.

CBS sent a camera crew to the restaurant, Le Mistral, on East 52nd Street after the board of health cited the expensive eatery for violations.

Lawyers for the restaurant owner, Jean Larriga, said the award by the New York state Supreme Court jury Friday was the highest ever in the state for trespass.

Times News Services

TOLEDO — Jimmy Carter, badly trailing Gov. Jerry Brown in California polls, Friday scrapped plans for a last-minute trip to the state in favor of a redoubled effort in Ohio and New Jersey before Tuesday's final round of primaries in the three states.

In a move unprecedented for his campaign, Carter also announced he is spending $45,000 for five minutes of late evening time on all three networks Sunday. Aides said the ad is aimed at countering anti-Carter advertising by his rivals, principally Rep. Norris Udall of Arizona, his main rival in Ohio.

Meanwhile, in Cleveland, member of Udall's Ohio delegation state announced Friday she has switched her support to Jimmy Carter to protest what she called "a completely negative, deceptive and lying" anti-Carter ad campaign by Udall.

Reagan, a former California governor, is favored to win the GOP primary Tuesday. Ford predicted the party would take "a terrible drubbing" in the general election if Reagan wins the nomination.

New Jersey, Ohio and California hold the last primary elections before the nomination conventions, with a total of 54 Democratic and 331 Republican delegates at stake. California gives the most Republican delegates, 167, and the most Democrat delegates, 280.

effort to conceal his views on the issues.

The increasingly bitter exchange marked the closing days of the battle for Tuesday's Ohio primary, where Carter is opposed by Udall and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. Both challengers have conceded that a clear-Carter victory here virtually would assure his nomination.

In Los Angeles, President Ford predicted Friday Republi- can will win the primary if Ronald Reagan wins his party's presidential nomination.

Ford said Reagan is too far to the right for most Americans.

Lady Bird Honored

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Lady Bird Johnson, widow of the late president Lyndon B. Johnson, was presented Thursday with the Golden Mercury Award for her work in beautification throughout the world.

The award, presented by Interflora, an international organization of florists, was created in 1963 to honor those who have made outstanding contributions to horticulture and floriculture.

charged with health-code violations.

The complaint against CBS said the camera crew took pictures inside the restaurant despite objections by the owner.

The restaurant said the violations had been cleared up the day before the camera crew arrived on July 6, 1972.

Illegal Nuclear Market Claimed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A journalist fired last month for alleged FBI connections said Friday she has information there is enough missing plutonium to indicate there may be a nuclear black market in the United States.

Jacqueline Srouji, who was fired May 5 from her job as a copy editor at the Tennessean newspaper for allegedly having a "special relationship" with the FBI, said she has documents which show unaccounted-for nuclear material to be 10 times in excess of that which is allowable under Nuclear Regulatory Commission guidelines.

"This would lead me to believe the possibility of nuclear gunrunners dealing in black market plutonium," she said.

She said the documents indicate enough missing plutonium at the Kerr-McGee nuclear processing plant in Crescent, Okla., to make it possible to offer plutonium for sale to other countries. The Crescent plant now is closed.

Mrs. Srouji said that 60 pounds of plutonium were unaccounted for at Kerr-McGee during 1974 and that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says only 12 pounds is needed to make a small nuclear weapon.

She made the statements in an interview when asked to comment on the interest the House of Representatives subcommittee on energy and environment has shown in her.

The subcommittee—chaired by Representative John Dingell (Dem., Mich.)—has been trying to get Mrs. Srouji, 32, to testify about the documents. She claims to have gathered them from unnamed sources while working on a yet-to-be-published book about development of nuclear energy around the world.

Alaska Oil Touted For Port Angeles

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A notice that it intends to seek state approval of a Port Angeles oil superport and a pipeline through Washington to midwest refineries was filed Friday by Northern Tier Pipeline Co.

State law requires that Northern Tier's plans for the oil facilities be approved by the Energy Facility Site Evaluation Council.

In a letter to the Council, President D. Michael Curran said, "We wish to emphasize that Northern Tier has no intention of constructing a refinery. The facilities contemplated by the applicant are pier, tank farm and pipeline."

No other details were included in the letter.

Love Letters 'Hoax'—Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Richard Nixon, through an aide, denied he wrote 22 letters which purportedly show he had a lengthy affair with the attractive wife of a European diplomat.

The letters "are part of a sordid hoax," the aide said Friday. Nixon's lawyer served notice on the publishing agent who revealed their existence that they should be treated as forgeries.

Three London newspapers reported this week that literary agent Scott Meredith has copies of 22 letters written from the White House by Nixon to the woman, who was not identified by name.

"The news reports alleging there exist handwritten 'love letters' from former president Richard Nixon are part of a sordid hoax," Nixon's chief aide, retired Marine Colonel Jack Brennan, said in a statement to news agencies.

"Such allegations are totally false and the purported letters are obvious forgeries."

The Birmingham, Ala., News says a source who asked not to be identified in any way claimed to have copies of about 20 such letters after receiving them from a friend who got them from a White House employee.

The unnamed source quoted in The News interview said:

"I gave them to the man who gave them to Meredith to make a literary inquiry as to their authenticity. I am upset at what has happened."

WARNING IGNORED

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he warned the House of Representatives five years ago not to grant control over staff salaries to Wayne Hays's administration committee, but Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill said Ford was wrong then, wrong now, and just taking cheap political shot."

With the congressional payroll-sex scandal spilling into the political arena, House Speaker Carl Albert appointed a committee of three Democrats to study misuse of public funds by members of Congress.

One of the three, Representative Lloyd Meeds, when asked whether it wouldn't be a good idea to have Republicans on the committee, replied bluntly: "How many Republicans have come under scrutiny so far?"

Only Hays, the Ohio Democrat, is under scrutiny for the payroll-sex charges.

140 Yachtsmen Battle the North Atlantic Alone

A total of 140 yachtsmen will set off from Plymouth, England, this weekend to race alone across the Atlantic. Their destination: New York, R.I., 3,000 miles away. David Palmer, news editor of London's Financial Times, is one of them.

By DAVID PALMER
The Washington Post

It will be the most extraordinary armada ever to put to sea. Huge boats, tiny boats, fast boats, slow boats, seafaring boats, ugly boats, seaworthy boats and one or two freaks. Their skippers come from 17 countries, including 12 from the United States and two from Canada. Four of them are women.

The queen of the fleet — a 238-foot four-masted French schooner — is the largest sailing vessel to be built since before the Second World War. She is called Club Méditerranée, the name of her principal commercial sponsor. She is the brainchild of Alain Colas, the Frenchman who won the last singlehanded race in 1972.

To build his new boat to defend this title, he has had to raise the best part of $2 million. By contrast, the smallest entry is a little Swedish sloop called Bris, just 20 feet long, about the length of an average living room.

My own boat is a 35-foot trimaran, one of 23 "multi-hulls" entered in the race (boats with more than one hull but no keel). She is owned by the London Financial Times, is called FT, and is painted pink, the same color as the paper on which the newspaper appears.

On Saturday, as those 140 skippers manoeuvre their boats across the starting line, it will be the culmination of months and years of planning and effort. Most of them will come to the starting line owing large sums of money to their bank managers.

All of them will have spent the last few days and weeks fighting off nerves; checking and rechecking the boat, the sails, the spars for any sign of weakness; ticking off stores, food, medical equipment, spares, clothing, against lists that they have spent winter evenings preparing. One small mistake at this stage can cost them the race — or their lives.

This year's singlehanded trans-Atlantic yacht race is already being called the greatest yacht race ever sailed. Sadly, it may be the last of its kind. The lure and the challenge of racing a small boat alone across the Atlantic has become so great that the organizers are being overwhelmed by their own event.

Originally, there were 199 entries for this year's race. The other 59 just could not make it in time.

It all began so differently. Back in 1960, the late Sir Francis Chichester, England's most famous yachtsman, and Col. "Blondie" Hasler, British Second World War hero, agreed to race each other from Plymouth to Newport for 25 cents. In the end, there were five starters in that first race in 1960 — and Chichester won in just over 40 days.

Four years later, there were 15 starters, two of them French. One of the Frenchmen, Eric Tabarly, won in 27 days, and was promptly made a chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur by General de Gaulle.

In 1968, there were 35 starters. But the weather was terrible. Only 19 reached the finish, the winner in 26 days.

For the fourth race, in 1972, the fleet had again risen — this time to 55. The race was won for the first time by a multi-hull — Alain Colas's trimaran, Pen Duick, reached newborn in 20 days.

Now a large number of the entries were receiving commercial sponsorship, newspapers and radio stations were competing for the day-by-day reports of skippers, and in France, "Le Transat" had become inextricably linked with national pride — a four yearly rerun of the Battle of Trafalgar.

In this year's race, seven of the nine largest boats are French, almost every one of them backed by heavy commercial sponsorship; Altogether there are 35 French entries, not far short of the British (44).

Why are we doing it? For the same reason that people climb Mt. Everest. I have just begun sailing offshore in a cruising catamaran, and I found myself greedily lapping up the stories of the 1972 race.

To race alone across the Atlantic, and to win that race at first was just a dream, but slowly the dream caught hold. I saw it as a challenge that I had to meet, a slightly mad ego trip.

The obstacles were considerable — I could not possibly afford it without financial help! I had just started a new and very time-consuming job; I had never raced offshore in my life; I was a beginner at coastal navigation and did not know how to use a sextant. The risks too were considerable but not overwhelming — of the 110 boats that had entered the first four races, three out of four had finished, and there had been no loss of life. The other side of that coin is that one of four had failed to finish, and there had been some mighty near misses. In the end, the only answer I can give is why I am doing it is the old cliché, because it is there.

To be alone with just your boat, the wind and the ocean — it is an experience that even I who know and understand it sometimes find hard to imagine during those long winter months when summer seems so far away.

But I know that no matter how great the pressure I am under, no matter how weighted down by the problems of everyday life, if I get into a boat and sail out to sea, those problems have vanished within hours. It is quite literally a different world that you enter, a world in which every change in the sound of the wind, in the song of the water along the hull, in the shape of the clouds, in the formation of the waves means something.

I thought when I first started sailing singlehanded that loneliness might overwhelm me. So far, I have never been lonely at sea. There is just too much to do. You come to know every habit of your boat, and every square inch of her. If something is wrong, it is almost as if the boat tells you so — you notice it quickly.

You become immersed in your tiny little world, surrounded by a huge ocean, and within it you work out how to live, how to make your boat go a little bit faster, how to eat, when to sleep, how to recognize and meet danger.

Last summer, as my qualifying cruise for the trans-Atlantic race, I sailed from the Azores to England, a distance of 1,200 miles. It was a slow trip — it took me 12 days. Try to imagine sailing along with the wind behind you at 10 knots, with just 100 miles to go to your destination. Everything is going right when suddenly you are joined by a school of dolphins. They are up to six feet long, move at tremendous speed, and cruise through the ocean in large packs.

A trimaran slicing through the water at 10 knots gives them three toys for the price of one, and they dive under and between the three hulls, never touching the boat, but missing it by inches as they leap out of the water in threes and fours.

They are up to six feet long, move at tremendous speed, and cruise through the ocean in large packs.

These are the moments that you never forget. But for every one of these there are five when the weather is foul, and you are cold and wet and miserable when you are so seasick that you do not know how you can keep going (if the weather is bad near the start of the race, I shall be fighting seasickness all the time, and if I succumb, it will weaken me considerably); when there is no wind at all, and you sit in your boat watching the sails sail, knowing that there is nothing you can do about it, but unable to accept the fact; when you are intensely frightened or in acute danger.

The Atlantic race poses a particular problem in that it is almost entirely what is called a "windward race" — that is the prevailing winds (and also the prevailing currents, especially the Gulf Stream) are dead against the direction of the race. The winds are also, for those who take the direct or "Great Circle" route over to Newfoundland, across the Grand Banks and down the Nova Scotian coast to Newport, predominantly strong winds.

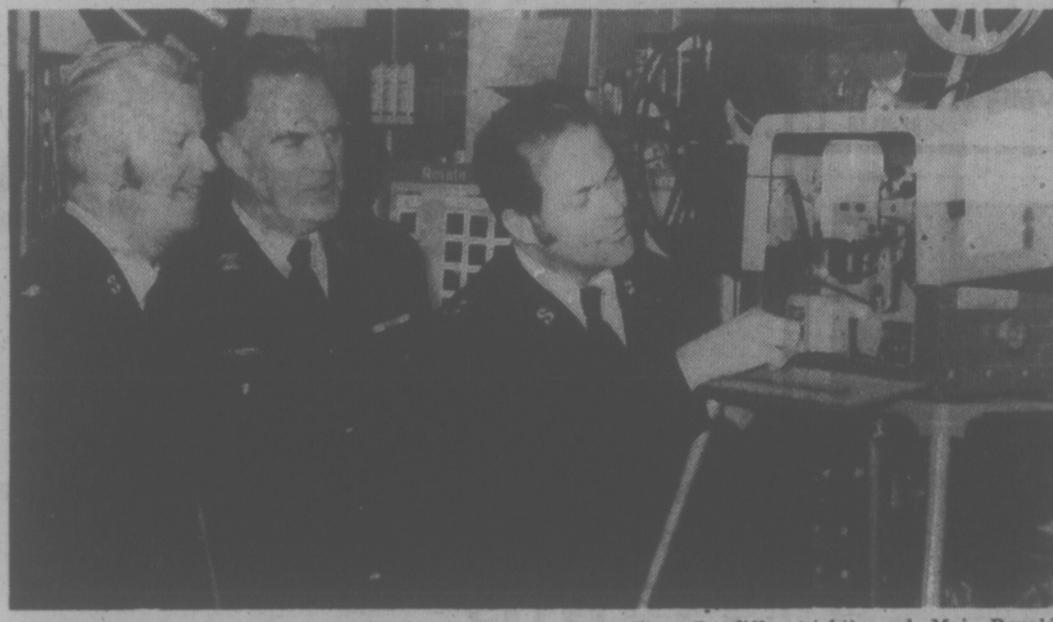

This northern route — just over 3,000 miles from start to finish — takes competitors through the lower limits of the iceberg zone. As if this was not enough, they must spend about 600 miles in an area where there is a 20 to 30 per cent chance of thick fog.

Because conditions on the northern route are so extremely adverse, a number of the smaller boats, and especially light boats like FT — take the so-called "southern" route through the Azores. This has the advantage of much lighter and generally more favorable winds, and of being much warmer, so that one is less liable to exhaustion through cold.

But it had two important disadvantages — it is nearly 500 miles longer, and there is a danger that boats will run out of wind entirely and stop dead for several days. Unless the weather conditions are extremely perverse, my own tactic will be to take the longer southern route, and to avoid the high winds and the cold of the north. My boat has been designed for light weather sailing, and this represents her best chance for winning the race.

In roughly a month's time, hopefully in time for the July 4 celebrations, I hope to bring a pink trimaran into Newport, as winner of the small class of what will probably be the last singlehanded trans-Atlantic race. After the finish, I shall tell readers what it was like. Then you will discover where fact and fantasy really meet.

Idea of All-Male Morticians Is Dead

FERGUS, Ont. (CP) — Women's liberation was unheard of 20 years ago when Mary Thomson started a trail in the all-male world of morticians.

"There was no need for women in men's lib," said Miss Thomson. "I was accepted as an equal. As a matter of fact, I wonder if women today would accept a man into their world as readily as the undertakers did in my case."

It was a desire to keep a long-established funeral business in the family that sent Miss Thomson to the Canadian School of Embalmers in 1954. She emerged a fully fledged mortician in 1956, the only girl in the class.

Today women undertakers are not uncommon. Nearly Elmina has two but Miss Thomson said she believes she is the only woman owner of an undertaking business in Canada.

The same delegation met in Khartoum last weekend with Sudanese President Jaafar Nimeri.

Berhanu said on his return to Addis Ababa that Nimeri's government supported the military council's recently announced policy, which calls for a negotiated settlement.

The peasant mobilization, which began eight weeks ago, followed the military government's exhortation to peasants to repel the "invading enemy," namely the secessionist guerrillas.

PARIS (AP) — France and Britain have decided against building more Concorde supersonic planes beyond the 16 already planned, French Transport Minister Marcel Cavallier said Friday.

Air France reported separately that it carried 5,053 passengers and was loaded at an average of 70.2 per cent of capacity in the four months since Concorde service started on the Paris-Dakar-Rio de Janeiro route.

The airline has figured it needs to be loaded at 61 per cent to break even on Concorde service once it has four of the supersonic aircraft in service.

Despite her 20 years as an undertaker, Miss Thomson cannot take for granted the grief of bereaved families.

"My heart goes out to them. In a small community like this you know everyone. You can't remain impersonal."

Some officials at airports and railway stations still do a double-take when they see the matronly-looking woman drive up in her station wagon to collect a body but the inhabitants of Fergus, a town of 5,000, have long become accustomed to the woman in the neat black suit directing funerals at churches.

Gas Licensing System Planned As Contingency for U.S.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If gasoline is rationed in the United States again, each licensed driver would get a coupon book providing 10 gallons a week. In addition, the driver could buy more ration books in a "white market" legitimized by the Federal Energy Administration.

The "white market" would be operated in commercial banks and savings and loan institutions, where people who prefer to sell rather than use their ration books could exchange them for money. The books would then be sold for the same price to people who feel they need more than 10 gallons of gasoline they're rationed each week.

Those are the highlights of a gas rationing plan soon to be submitted by the FEA to Congress, which asked for the plan more than six months ago. The rationing plan is only a contingency, to be implemented if war, natural disaster or another embargo cuts the country off from its oil imports for an extended period.

The FEA, the federal agency that regulates energy prices and supplies, would administer any rationing programs, which it has consistently opposed. The agency says such a plan would be a bureaucratic nightmare, involving at least 100,000 persons in the administration of the plan.

The FEA also claims that rationing would cost $400 million to set up and $2 billion a year to operate.

In the plan it will soon submit to Congress, the FEA says the annual operating costs would include $513 million to print and distribute the coupons, $401 million to process and report gasoline availability, $340 million to run the "white market" and $291 million to operate state and local rationing offices.

The FEA figures it would cost $250 million a year to keep track of counterfeit coupon operations and black market and bootleg gasoline operations.

The most that motorists would be allotted under the scheme to be proposed by the FEA is 10 gallons a week. Motorists could get as little as 6.5 gallons a week under the plan, depending on the severity of a shortage.

The FEA is assuming that a gasoline shortage would range from 15 to 25 per cent of supply.

The 10-gallon allotment per week would come from a 15 per cent shortage, the 6.5 gallon-gallon ration from a 25 per cent shortage.

Mrs. Goldenzweig

'Jungle' MD Cures Wilting Patients

By LAWRENCE VAN GELDER

NEW YORK — Virginia Goldenzweig is a jungle doctor.

But before anyone conjures up visions of an ascetic healer performing feats of advanced surgery on primitive tribesmen by candlelight to the rattle of drums and the ululation of exotic beats slithering among the lianas, let it be explained that the jungle is in her office in the heart of Manhattan and the title "doctor" is strictly honorary.

Nevertheless, curing the sick is what Mrs. Goldenzweig is expert at — as long as the sick are plants.

"If somebody has a problem with their plant, they bring it over here, and I try to cure it," she said the other day from the heart of her jungle — the New York office where the 32-year-old Mrs. Goldenzweig works as an estimator-biller in the financial service department of Grey Advertising.

Around her — on desks, a table, cabinets and sils, and hanging from the ceiling — were, she estimated 100 plants: wandering Jews, purple passions, begonias, elephant ears, African violet, palm trees, spider plants, cactus, zinnias, marigolds, and grapefruit, orange and avocado trees.

Some of them are being readied for transplanting to the garden behind the apartment. Mrs. Goldenzweig shares with her husband, Hugo, a concert pianist, and with Amadeus, their music-loving dog; the rest, mainly healthy, but a few ill, belong to Mrs. Goldenzweig's 80 or so fourth-floor colleagues.

"Group heads or super-visors bring in plants and ask me what to do with them," said Mrs. Goldenzweig, who traces her love for and skill with growing things to the hours she spent as a child with her mother in Rosario, Argentina, tending and experimenting with pots full of

"I don't read too much about plants," she said in an effort to elaborate on her curative powers. "It's something that is natural to me."

Of the ailing plants brought to her by colleagues, she says: "Sometimes they have to be transplanted because they have old soil. Or they put too much water or too little water."

Mrs. Goldenzweig is a firm believer in the power of a few kind words or some music. At home, she says, "We say nice things to the plants. "We thank them for the flowers they gave us."

Teacher's Service Noted

After 45 years a teacher, Miss Jean Matheson is calling it quits.

She has little choice in the matter for last November she reached the mandatory retirement age of 65.

But the students and staff at Quadra Elementary School where she has taught the past 30 years aren't about to have her leave either unnoticed or unremembered.

Principal Norman Trim said a reception for her is being planned at the auditorium and gymnasium of the school at 3091 Quadra on Monday, June 21 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

He expects more than 200 of her colleagues and former pupils will attend.

Trim said Miss Matheson, who began her teaching in Guelph, was a teacher of the old school. "A strict disciplinarian, she was sometimes feared but always respected and in the end appreciated by the legion of children she taught, he said.

Never married, she sent a number of children to church camps each summer, paying the shop herself. This summer she's sponsoring 18 youngsters, Trim said.

In retirement Miss Matheson plans to enter the real estate business, and continue residing in Victoria.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP
Dear Lynn and Joel:
I bought several incandescent grow lamps to help my foliage plants in the living room. Some do fine, others have spindly growth. Do I need fluorescent tubes also? My bulbs are mounted on a ceiling track and if I need fluorescent tubes also I would like them up high, as low-hanging fixtures wouldn't work. They would hang in the way of glass doors. Are the bulbs I bought a rip-off? Thank you.—P.O.H.

Dear P.O.H.:

First we must determine if what you bought were actually incandescent lights or especially produced grow lights. The two things are not the same — incandescent lights are simply ordinary house lights which do help plants grow if they're kept far enough away as such lights give off a very hot light.

Fluorescent lights are brighter and entirely cool and much more beneficial. Grow lights are also cool and have a more purplish cast than ordinary fluorescent.

These are the best, and if they're what you have — either in bulb form or tube form — you were not ripped off. The spindly growth of some of your plants may be a result of being placed too far away from the lights or some other problem such as overwatering or overfeeding.

Dear Lynn and Joel:

My question: Why does society not stress that men can be into plants as much as women? Your column is one example because it appears in the women's section of the newspaper. I was somewhat surprised to find out that so many of my male friends were plant buffs; I've understood this to be more of a woman's hobby than a man's. Don't you think a few words letting people know about this will benefit many? — C.M.

Dear C.M.:

We certainly do. We've said it thousands of times, but as Originally, men took care of the outdoor greenery and such, leaving the indoor plants to their womenfolk. But times have changed... and so have attitudes. Little Muffet Scared to Death

Wonderful World of Animals

By Dr. Frank Miller

DEAR DR. MILLER: Muffet, my little Yorkshire terrier, has developed a positive phobia about any strange places. She never used to be like this. She huddles right next to me, never wanders off to explore like she used to. The poor thing's scared to death. Once when I left her without thinking, she got hysterical and crashed into things following after me. (I've never left her since, needless to say.) The little old dear is perfectly normal at home. Confident, relaxed, and greets strangers with no fear. Is this a form of senility, do you think? She certainly seems spry otherwise. She's due for her yearly checkup soon, but I was just curious in the meantime. — O.N.

DEAR O.N.: These symptoms could be due to aging factors, certainly, particularly those related to the eyes. If Muffet were blind, or nearly so, she might negotiate familiar home surroundings with comparative ease and feel relaxed and, not surprisingly, at home. Conversely, in unfamiliar surroundings she'd be apprehensive, and blindness would be an obvious, possibly terrifying, handicap.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Just the briefest of answers will do for this perhaps not-too-important question. Is it really possible for an English sparrow to actually hatch a new-laid egg within ten days? — G.D.

DEAR G.D.: Yes. (But she has to concentrate.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: This Siamese of mine, Helix by name, is probably the cutest cat I've ever had, and too smart by half. Only thing is, he's a plant terrorist. I love my plants, too. It's so sad to find bitten-off leaves, stems, blooms and other parts of my plants. Of course, he never does this in my sight. If he did, I'd be able to make my point. He's totally an indoor cat. Except behind locked doors, is there any way to isolate my plants from a cat which can reach anywhere? — M.K.

DEAR M.K.: Given a strong, high ceiling, hanging plants on a pulley arrangement is one approach. Encircling each plant or enclosing an entire batch of plants in hardware cloth or chicken wire will also work. Other deterrent systems ranging from moats to guard dogs are, admittedly, impractical for the average would-be green thumb. Actually putting your siamese behind the locked door is the most practical approach of all, provided you're constantly vigilant, that you can convince the cat to accept this restriction — and provided that you have the door.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a pony who sneezes and coughs and wheezes at times. I wet the hay and grain down for him, but he still continues to cough. Is there anything new on the market for this condition? — K.F.

DEAR K.F.: These symptoms could be due to bacterial infection or damage in the respiratory tract resulting from one, or to an allergy, or to one of the other respiratory diseases common to horses or something, but he seems to sapiens). Whether the newest medication or one of the old reliables would be appropriate, for that matter, whether any of them would be of any real value, obviously depends on the specific condition(s) involved. Your pony's prescription, if any, would be up to his veterinarian.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My canary, Ripley, must have been reincarnated from a duck. Every time I turn on the water in the sink, he gets turned on. If I turn him loose, he heads right for it and takes a soaking wet shower. I kind of worried at first that he might catch pneumonia or something, but he seems to have a natural aversion to water.

With DOROTHY FRASER

Ever thought of a mobile home?

How we can have lived Victoria for going on 15 years and never heard of Florence Lake, we'll never know! . . . It's such a pretty little lake . . . just a bit north of Thetis . . . only eight miles from City Hall . . . and you can whizz out there in practically no time flat! . . . How we came to make this "discovery" is that we were invited to visit Hidden Valley Mobile Home Park which is right at the end of Florence Lake Road . . . and there we got the surprise of our life when we saw what a beautiful layout it is! . . . 160 mobile homes (some of which look anything but!) fronting winding paved streets, meandering up a gentle hillside . . . nestling among trees and gardens . . . and for those on the upper reaches, a view of Juan de Fuca Strait and the Olympics! . . . We learned there are certain areas of the park reserved for adults only . . . that all electric, water and cable wiring is underground . . . mail is delivered to one's home . . . a school bus picks up the younger tenants . . . Well-behaved pets are welcomed . . . There's a club house which puts on dances and is the hub of all sorts of other activities . . . Women's Night, Men's Night . . . Youth Group for teenagers . . . In a word, Hidden Valley is a self-contained community, with its own elected park steward and resident park manager . . . No empty lots are available, but the park management has listings for several mobile homes whose owners have to leave this Shangri-la . . . Singles and doubles . . . from $14,000 to $25,000 . . . Why not phone, and go have a look at them? . . . Hidden Valley Mobile Home Park, 2500 Florence Lake Rd., 386-3291 or 478-0034.

Titillate Dad's sweet tooth

Wondering what to give Father on Sunday, June 20th? . . . Well, we know as a positive fact that most men have a sweet tooth . . . though they'd probably rather be boiled in oil than admit to buying candy for themselves! . . . Father's Day is an excellent opportunity to present Dad with a box of his favorite kind of chocolates or candy . . . and we guarantee his eyes will light up when you produce a box of something from Purdy's! . . . After all, nothing but the best is good enough for him, is it? . . . Purdy's tell us that their Peanut Brittle is a perennial favorite with the men-folk . . . It's so crunchy and full of nuts . . . and since it costs only $2 a pound . . . (or $1 for a half-pound) . . . it's something the children can easily afford . . . Purdy's fudge is lovely, too . . . and very appealing to the male sweet tooth . . . Five, different varieties . . . and just $2.85 per lb. . . . Other masculine favorites are chocolate coated nuts . . . brazils, cashews, filberts and almonds . . . Clusters are something else fathers usually like . . . Coconut, raisin and peanut in these . . . $3.50 a lb. or $1.75 for a 1/2 lb. And if you want to give something super . . . how about Purdy's Yard Long Box of chocolates at $6.25? . . . Dad will love it! . . . Purdy's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1241. Mayfair Shopping Centre, 385-5032 and Empress Hotel, 385-3555.

What's new at Charmante's?

A lady told us the other day she never misses reading this column because she wants to be kept glued in on her favorite store, Charmante's! . . . Naturally we ourselves don't play favorites, so we just concede that it's an excellent reason for reading us . . . To reward our admirer with news of the latest arrivals at her favorite store! . . . When we visited Charmante's this week we fell in love with a 3-piece outfit consisting of coral paisley cotton skirt, and shiny black, double-textured sheer . . . under which is worn a belted ribbed knit linen skivvy in a natural shade. Another outfit we particularly liked was a sort of pinkish cotton knit . . . red with a white geometric pattern. It's a 2-piece affair with a very different V-neck top, with small stand-up collar and the new cap sleeves . . . cinched at the waist with a double rolled belt! . . . There are some smart jump suits . . . one in navy polyester with short sleeves, front zipper and jaunty red, white and blue elastic belt . . . A pretty Leslie Faye pant suit has yellow polyester pants, sleeveless top, and Chanel jacket striated in yellow, blue, green and white . . . A separate triangular scarf matches! . . . Several cool, attractive pantsuits with the denim look . . . Short sleeves and jacket trimmed with white stitching, and white zipped pockets . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Standard will give you cash for your trade-ins!

We shouldn't be surprised if a lot of people who are planning taking their families on holidays this summer . . . are getting just a bit concerned . . . What with ferry fares doubled . . . just about everything else you can think of going up . . . cash requirements are going to be greater than ever! . . . We discovered this week how some of this lovely cash can be acquired fast! . . . Maybe you're going to be needing some new furniture for your home . . . well, you can go to Standard Furniture and trade-in some of your present stuff . . . and they'll pay you cash for it . . . while the new things can be put on a budget plan if necessary! . . . Standard have a large "Furniture Bargain Annex" on View St. two doors down from the Parkade . . . where they handle used furniture . . . and right now have a tremendous selection of all sorts of things! . . . We saw some really neat bargains when we dropped in the other day . . . great furnishings for a cottage or basement . . . or for a young couple just starting out! . . . But to get back to what we were saying about cash . . . go in to Standard's main store and talk to any of the salesmen . . . They'll arrange to send a man out to your home to appraise what you want to trade in . . . and next thing you know there'll be a cheque in the mail! . . . Incidentally, there's free delivery on all furniture, both Main and Bargain Annex stores! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Beautiful summer handbags

Munday's have always carried some pretty nice handbags to complement their beautiful shoes . . . but they're really outdone themselves with the collection of summer handbags we saw there last Monday! . . . There's one group of quite unusual bags . . . good sized totes made of canvas and printed cotton . . . with matching belt and square scarf! . . . The bag is nicely finished inside with a big zippered compartment . . . and you'll love the designs . . . one a brown and beige print with squares containing figures of lady golfers . . . another a real Parisian print . . . Either of these is a conversation piece . . . and just $30 for the bag-belt-scarf set! . . . Straw is very much in demand this summer . . . and Munday's have all sorts of straws . . . Dressy bags . . . fancy straws with fake tortoise shell handles . . . Blue, coffee, white, bone, yellow . . . imported from Italy, and priced at $21 . . . Some Spanish straws are natural colored with different trims and wooden handles . . . another group which match the Italian straws . . . the canvas with hand embroidery . . . Then there are some beautiful real leather envelope bags . . . a very pretty one with diamond shapes in different shades of brown! . . . A gorgeous leather bag with deep handles which would be perfect for travelling . . . Darling little straw and bead bags in various colors, just right for summer evenings . . . See them all at . . . Munday's, 1263 Douglas St., 383-2211.

How about a sweater or shirt for Father?

We really hadn't given any thought to Father's Day when we were looking at the new shipments of Alan Paine sweaters and Viyella shirts in Wilson's men's dept. this week . . . but now that we come to write this, we realize that any of these choice garments would make a Father's Day gift par excellence! . . . First of all, the sweaters: There are Shetland cardigans with cable design, leather buttons . . . Heron or sky blue, camel and chamois, priced at $50 . . . Crew neck pullovers in the same cable pattern at $37.50 . . . Plain Shetlands, and some with diamond-shapes in three different color combinations . . . as well as wide horizontal stripes in three colors . . . Plain Shetlands come in blue, celery, parchment, white, rust, brick and natural . . . surely a color there to please any Dad! . . . And priced at only $23.50 . . . Alan Paine 100% camelhair pullovers are really elegant . . . Crew neck ones with a sand and camel diamond pattern in front . . . $50 . . . Plain camel in crew or V neck at $48.50 . . . As for the Viyella shirts . . . they're made by Deacon Bros. . . . come in a variety of plain colors, tartans, and tartans . . . Wilson's tell us this is the best selection of men's Viyella shirts they've had for a year! . . . W & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Paulin's now just around the corner

Don't be alarmed if you arrive at Paulin's Government St. office and find it empty and in darkness . . . it's just that Paulin's have moved to Broughton St., just around the corner from Pemberton Holmes, and next door to the B.C. Land Office . . . Their new quarters are most inviting and attractive . . . and the same highly experienced and amazingly knowledgeable people are there to serve you . . . help you plan all your trips . . . book you on cruises and package tours . . . "custom-tailor" trips to wherever your fancy may dictate . . . advise you on places to go . . . and what to do when you get there! . . . And don't think you need to be planning something "big" in the way of travel to avail yourself of Paulin's services . . . they'll be just as happy to book your flight to Toronto as to Timbuctoo (well almost!) . . . And the point we're trying to make is that if you're travelling anywhere at all . . . by air, sea or rail . . . let Paulin's take care of everything! . . . You'll get friendly, personalized service, expert, informed advice . . . free yourself of all the pesky details . . . and at no extra cost (unless something very unusual and time-consuming is involved!) . . . NEW CAPITAL CITY EYED FOR EGYPT

CARIO (UPI) — A Egyptian cabinet minister has presented plans for constructing a possible new capital city to replace Cairo, the newspaper Al Ahram said in today's early editions.

The newspaper said minister of state for local government Mohamed Hamed Mahmoud gave the plan to the cabinet's supreme planning committee headed by Premier Mamdouh Salem.

It said Mahmoud suggested a location in the desert area near Wadi El-Natrun and the Qattara Depression, about halfway between Cairo and Alexandria west of the Nile Delta.

In Furniture Styling Key Word Is Functional

TORONTO (CP) — Functional furniture is the youthful trend of the '70s. Whether it be a sofa for an apartment, living-room or family den, or bedroom suites for young marrieds or children, there's a movement towards clean lines and style.

Much of the furniture exhibited at the recent Toronto furniture show is built of plastic rather than wood or steel. As research into the area of man-made materials improves, most of today's furnishings hardly stray from looking like expensively crafted pieces.

Many designers are seeing the need to produce such investment furnishings as sectional sofas, built-in radios and lights in bedroom suites and are using easy-care fabrics in upholstery.

Graceful lines of the sofa are built on a frame of foam

Fire Investigated

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — The cause of a fire Thursday night at a large warehouse at the $2 billion Syncrude Canada oil sands Project 25 is being investigated.

Syncrude officials, in a news release, said there were no injuries and while damage estimates were not complete, the loss would be "sizeable."

The fire, the first of major proportions at the site, broke out about 9 p.m. in a 60 by 120-foot metal sheet warehouse containing tools used to construct the project's first two draglines — machines that will mine the oil sand from the firm's 7,000-acre site.

The draglines themselves, being erected in another area, were not affected and the spokesman said the blaze would not seriously affect the construction schedule which calls for the plant to open by mid-1978.

BY MAY E. MacLEAN

Now that the warm Spring weather is here, I've had to scurry around and make three new tennis dresses. Not having too much time for dressmaking these days, I made all three from the same pattern styles and material.

To make them individually different, I decided on knitting an edging, rather than the bought trimming which was rather run-of-the-mill. I used a change of colour for each dress, so I can now wear them in rotation.

The edging measures five eights of an inch wide approximately when finished, and you will need number thirteen steel knitting needles, the short sock needles are ideal, and also number thirty crochet cotton in any colour. Repeat the instructions in brackets the numbers of times stated immediately after the second bracket.

Starting at the narrow edge, cast on three stitches. First row:— wrong side — Knit one, purl-one, knit one.

Second row:— Knit one, (yarn over, knit one) twice, five stitches on needle.

Third row:— Knit one, purl to last stitch, knit one.

Fourth row:— Knit one (yarn over, knit one) four times, nine stitches on needle.

Fifth and every alternate row:— Knit one, purl to last stitch, knit one.

Sixth row:— Knit three, slip one, knit two together, pass slip stitch over, knit one, three stitches on needle.

Seventh row:— Knit two, slip one, knit two together, pass slip stitch over, knit two, five stitches on needle.

Eighth row:— Knit two, slip one, knit two together, pass slip stitch over, knit two, five stitches on needle.

slip stitch over, knit one, three stitches again on needle.

Repeat these ten rows until you have the required length, then cast off after a tenth row. Press lightly on the wrong side under a warm iron and damp cloth.

This is a most simple trimming to make, and I am sure you will memorize the instructions very quickly. It's also a very pretty trimming and one you will find lots of use for, so clip these instructions for future reference.

'Rather Die at Home Than Inch by Inch'

EDMONTON (CP)—Many old people would rather die at home, with dignity than "dying inch by inch" at a nursing home, says Lydia Bragger of New York, a member of the national steering committee of the Grey Panthers.

She told the 10th annual Alberta Council on Aging Conference at the University of Alberta that the Grey Panthers, a senior citizens' action group, was formed in the United States five years ago to advocate alternatives to nursing homes and hospitals in the caring of old people.

The group now has 38 chapters throughout the U.S. and a membership of 8,000. Some chapters, including the one in New York which Ms. Bragger, 71, started three years ago, are also fighting for better and free medical help for the elderly.

Volunteers will telephone senior citizens living alone to make sure they are not having problems and to offer help when needed.

Day-care centres were started in Baltimore so senior citizens would have a place to go during the day where they might need care and return home for the night.

Last year, the New York chapter went to the American Medical Association's convention to "launch a protest against the medical profession."

Ms. Bragger said since many old people are not given the care and attention they need so they can stay at home and remain active members of society.

Ms. Bragger said since many old people are not able to take care of themselves but may require help with shopping, shovelling or mowing the lawn, a program has been set up in New York City where others go to help them when needed.

The attorney, Paul Armstrong, said Julia and Joanne Quinlan spoke with Bishop Lawrence B. Casey May 21 to discuss giving the proceeds from the article to the Roman Catholic diocese of Paterson, N.J.

The money will be used for an as yet unspecified health project run by the diocese and will be donated on behalf of Miss Quinlan, hospitalized in St. Clare's Hospital in Paterson, N.J., in a coma since April 1975.

Lenore Hershey, editor of the Ladies Home Journal, announced earlier the magazine bought the rights to their exclusive story about their daughter.

Armstrong said the Quinlan's, who live in Landing, N.J., believed it would be best for society if they were able to fully tell their story about their daughter's ordeal and their fight to allow her to die "with grace and dignity."

Fair Family Law Needs Co-Operation

As a follow-up to last Monday's column about Victoria Status of Women Action Group's pamphlet on marriage laws and the Berger Commission — and in order to try and answer questions that have come to me since — I've talked to Norrie Preston, one of two British Columbia members of the federal Advisory Council on the Status of Women. (Joan Wallace of Vancouver is the other.) Mrs. Preston's immediate reaction is that "the entire family law area is one of importance and immediate concern to all Canadians."

She also believes that "it will take the full co-operation of both federal and provincial governments to design a family law package which is fair and just."

Looking to a federal-provincial meeting of attorneys-general, scheduled for this month, she points to the fact that part of that meeting will be devoted to a discussion of family law.

"Our attorney-general must therefore make himself aware of material prepared by federal and provincial law reform commissions relating to issues of divorce, matrimonial property, maintenance and support."

At annual meeting of the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, held in Winnipeg last month, she said: "We outlined a statement of the meaning of equity in marriage in which the principles adopted provide a framework against which ACSW can measure the various laws affected by marriage partnership, thus providing a basis for consistency."

Canadians have a right to know what they are getting into when they get married.

They have a right to know how the laws of a given province will apply to their new way of life.

The above principles and 11 others as basic and essential to the recognition and protection of the rights of both men and women in marriage, were endorsed.

It was also suggested that public information programs directed at the young may be necessary in order that Canadians be as informed as possible of their rights and obligations in marriage.

Other basic principles underline the rights of couples to opt out of any fixed matrimonial regime, after independent legal advice, before or during the course of their marriage; the right of each spouse to some minimum guarantee in marriage with respect to family assets and security and the right of couples to make their own choices in living and financial arrangements regardless of traditional preconceptions or sexually-determined roles.

Responsibility of the state to protect the integrity of individuals and the institution of marriage "but not to interfere," was adopted.

Mrs. Preston said, as well as the joint responsibility of the state and the family for the protection, care and well-being of children; and the right of that partner working within the home, rather than in the paid labor force, to have her or his work recognized as an equal contribution to the marriage partnership.

These were all referred to in the council's report paper on one-parent families which drew a close connection between the weak economic position of the one-parent family and the weak economic position of women, and outlined the double jeopardy for the woman who is a head of a single-parent family.

The paper called for recognition of the contribution of time and care provided by a person caring for dependents in the home and the right of that person to full economic and political power and independent security.

During the annual meeting the council reiterated its view that Indian women must be protected under federal human rights legislation, and that Section 12 (1) (b) be removed from the Indian Act.

"The ACSW deplores discrimination against women in any circumstance," it was recorded.

Discrimination on the grounds of sex against women is inexcusable. ACSW urges that immediate priority in the Indian Act consultative process now ongoing be given to removing this existing discrimination.

Asked how she assesses Family Law in British Columbia at the present time, Norrie Preston says "the current law reflects the values of 19th century England, not 20th century British Columbia. It was designed for persons of moderate or great wealth.

"Because the development of Family Law has been hampered by mid-Victorian attitudes, our legal system has not made an adequate response to marital disputes."

"In fact it is believed by some people that the present Family Court situation brings more problems than it solves."

Postscript — The Advisory Council on the Status of Women is a federal advisory body, consisting of 30 members, appointed from each of the provinces by the Minister responsible for the Status of Women, to advise the government on matters pertaining to the status of women in Canada.

Terms of office of about one-third of the members expires each year at the end of May.

Term of the first chairman, Dr. Katie Cooke, expired last month.

As yet Marc Lalonde, Minister responsible for the Status of Women has not named her successor, although Mrs. Preston says "more than likely" it will be June Menzies of Winnipeg, present vice-chairman of the council.

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

ribavirin given by mouth demonstrated a significant therapeutic effect against influenza-A in a Mexican boarding-school epidemic in 1973. Not only were clinical symptoms promptly relieved, but two days after treatment was stopped, the infecting virus could be recovered from only three of the 21 ribavirin-treated patients. It was present in 22 of 24 placebo-treated patients.

In Brazil, a controlled study of the effect of ribavirin against hepatitis showed more rapid clinical improvement and faster drops in diagnostic blood studies than was recorded in placebo-treated patients. There were no toxic side effects noted in the ribavirin-treated patients.

Similar studies against hepatitis are in the planning stage in both the United States and England.

Inosiplex, which is to be marketed in the United States under the name of "isoprinosine," has shown a greater effect than a placebo against herpes in double-blind studies.

Similar studies against hepatitis are of special interest because its effect seems to be in enhancing the immune mechanisms of the one who is infected by a virus rather than by exerting its effect on the virus itself.

This is similar to the immunopotentiating action of a agent's effective against cancer, which are currently under study. It may well be that among the many anticancer drugs that increase the effective immunity against cancer, there may be some that will also have an effect on viral disease.

The children will participate in activities in the areas of games, creative dance, gymnastics and possibly some swimming.

He is seeking children from Grades one to three for the course, which takes place from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., July 8 to 16.

The presence of children will help considerably in bringing relevance to, and thus make more effective this short course in educating teachers in this particular area of study," said Baker.

He said anyone with a youngster who would be willing to volunteer should contact the physical education division of the Faculty of Education as soon as possible, at 477-6911, local 356.

Now, encouraging results in clinical trials with new antiviral agents have been reported from Latin America. If the difficulties involved in clinical testing of new drugs in this country can be overcome, trials will soon be under way in the United States.

Ribavirin, which is being made available in the United States under the name of "virazole," has been used in Mexico in nearly 400 patients with various viral diseases including hepatitis, influenza, and herpes simplex and herpes zoster.

Among the controlled tests, one concerned the effectiveness of a five per cent ribavirin ointment as compared with a placebo in the treatment of herpes zoster (shingles).

According to Dr. Humberto Fernandez Zertuche of Mexico City, the accelerated rate at which the ribavirin-treated lesions disappeared and the speed with which the associated pain was relieved demonstrated a specific impact of the agent of the herpes virus.

Now, encouraging results in clinical trials with new antiviral agents have been reported from Latin America.

Ribavirin, which is being made available in the United States under the name of "virazole," has been used in Mexico in nearly 400 patients with various viral diseases including hepatitis, influenza, and herpes simplex and herpes zoster.

Among the controlled tests, one concerned the effectiveness of a five per cent ribavirin ointment as compared with a placebo in the treatment of herpes zoster (shingles).

According to Dr. Humberto Fernandez Zertuche of Mexico City, the accelerated rate at which the ribavirin-treated lesions disappeared and the speed

Car Thief Receives Probation

Catherine E. Pipke, 821 Esquimalt, was placed on probation for two years Friday by county court Judge G. B. Ladner, who suspended sentence for auto theft.

She was found guilty Monday of stealing a car belonging to Budget Rent-A-Car of Victoria Ltd., 843 Douglas, between Oct. 30 and Nov. 12. The charge involved an overdue rented car.

Judge Ladner ordered her not to associate with any persons "whom she might reasonably be presumed to know" are users, possessors or traffickers in narcotics.

After hearing her describe efforts to combat drug addiction, Judge Ladner said "I feel some degree of assurance from the way you spoke this morning that you are taking steps to stabilize yourself."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old Wilkinson Road jail inmate who spent only about $140 of an illegally-received $600 during 16 hours of unauthorized freedom learned Friday in Victoria provincial court the price for his two crimes was 10 extra months in jail.

Daryl John Slack pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of being unlawfully at large from the jail May 19 and a Victoria charge of uttering a $681.99 cheque the same day.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Slack was sentenced Oct. 27, 1975, in Victoria to one year definite plus eight months "indeterminate" for break-in and theft. He said Slack was due for parole next month and would have completed the entire sentence in March, 1977.

Slack was allowed out at about 1:30 p.m. May 19 on a work-release pass to a job he had held for some time at a Victoria cafe. He was due back at 11:30 that night but did not return and jail officials found he had been laid off at the cafe.

What's more, said Birkett, Slack got his last paycheque of $81.99 from the cafe, raised it to $681.99 and cashed it at a bank. Slack gave himself up at the jail about 3:45 p.m. May 20 and had $538.82 on him.

The young man told police that he "did it (raising the cheque) on impulse ... an hour later, I wanted to pay the $600 back but I was too scared."

Judge Harold Alder sentenced Slack to nine months for the cheque, said the $538.82 will be given to the bank to ease its $600 loss, added one month for the absence and said the total of 10 months would be added to Slack's present time.

"You've been rather stupid, haven't you?" Alder asked.

"Yes, I have," Slack replied quietly.

Former Victorian Richard James Poole, 19, now of Richmond, B.C., pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of possession of morphine sulphate Aug. 3, 1975, which he knew to be stolen.

Birkett said it was among several drugs stolen early that day from Jubilee Pharmacy, 612 View. Defence lawyer Roger Cardinal said Poole had "no part in the theft."

Poole was sentenced a week ago to three months for possession of the morphine sulphate as an illegal narcotic. Alder imposed a similar term starting Friday, which means an added few days for Poole.

A fine of $500 was set by Alder for Keith David Kirkpatrick, 30, of 2861 Craigowan, who was found guilty after a trial on a Victoria charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The charge resulted from an incident Dec. 29, 1975, in which a motorist out of Kirkpatrick's car and Kirkpatrick followed the vehicle to the Mayfair shopping centre, where the other driver stopped and was punched, receiving facial bruises and abrasions.

Traffic fines included* two for impaired driving in Victoria, with both drivers pleading guilty. They were Kenneth Eugene Dahlback, 28, of 2891 Craigowan, stopped May 29 and fined $400, and Robert Van Humbeck, 50, of 1207 Colville, stopped Feb. 11 and fined $350.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, June 6

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on showing wares, display, public relations, response. If single, there could be talk of marriage. Married or single, a contract or legal specification stands high on agenda. You will finish task and gain wider recognition than originally anticipated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 18): One who has aided you wants commendation. Yes, ego is a part of picture. Show that you can be creative in giving praise. Message should become increasingly clear. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Moderation is more important than usual. Remember!

GEMINI (May 21-June 18): Good moon aspect coincides now with love. You feel it and you are happier. Changes occur — young persons involved. Your emotional responses are sharpened. Creative processes surge to forefront. You'll make right decisions!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your desires are fulfilled. Loved one pays meaningful compliment. Pressure is relieved. Social activity accelerates. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals could help make this an "interesting" time. Remember diet resolutions!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on short trips, attention to details, ability to put ideas to work. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio could play prominent roles. Specifically, you receive call or message which amounts to "green light". Then you will be on the go!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money changes hands. Try to make sure your money doesn't leave your hands. Emphasis is on financial potential, payments, collections. If you piece together clues, hints you come up with plan that should be profitable. Gemini is in picture and so is another Virgo.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on personal appearance, personality and excellent timing. You know where to be and when to arrive at destination. Your own judgment, initiative serves best purposes. Be a self-starter. Family situation improves. Harmony can be restored. Taurus is in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aura of mystery prevails. This can be transformed into a m.o.m.u. Certain subtle events occur — there are innumerable rather than direct statements. Hospital, institutional, charitable organization seems very much in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on friendliness, popularity, the winning of contests. Member of opposite sex flatters, enlarges your ego. All to the good — if you maintain balance. Be amused at your own foibles. If you laugh, you hurdle obstacles. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on civic, church duties and achievements. You finish project and could receive acclaim. Aries, Libra might be part of scenario. You share a burden... but in so doing you get rid of one of your own "complicated" complexes. Message will be clarified!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good Moon aspect coincides now with long distance, spiritual challenge, education, spanning an "ocean". Creative juices flow. You feel more vital, active, alive. Children could be involved. Change of routine, scenery indicated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're able to penetrate surface appearances. You learn truth about involvements, money, relationships affecting partner, mate. Aquarian is likely to be in picture. A "judge" is made and it is serious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If June 6th is your birthday you have unusual voice, natural ability as a teacher. You are restless, creative, artistic. If single, you marry this year — married or single there is added responsibility, perhaps "going into business". There could be an addition to your family. September is a highlight month. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, June 7

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take special care. Legal papers are concerned. Money is involved. Someone may want you to sign agreement giving up something for nothing. Show that you won't play that game — outline your own goals, protect interests. Own your time — rushing now brings trouble, expense.

TAURUS (April 20-May 18): Follow through on hunch — refuse to be intimidated by one who wants to "lord it over you" by reason of experience. Respect tradition but don't be awed by it. You're going to create your own tradition! Money picture will be brighter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on romantic involvement, change of plans, revisions where hopes and wishes are concerned. You finish task, gain wider recognition. Your offerings are "in tune" with public tastes, demands. Be confident!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid scattering forces. Be versatile, but keep main goal in sight. Creative resources surge forward — popularity increases. Member of opposite sex is attracted and makes no secret of it. Jealousy might be a problem — if you so permit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on journey, education, future plans, getting help — and funds. Another Aquarian could be part of scenario. Your goal is closer than might be imagined. Verification comes via special messenger.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stick to project — apply pressure. Concentrate. Be aware of details. Obtain appraisals. Know worth of property. Check fine print — read between the lines. Study Aries, Taurus messages. Frank discussion with family member is on agenda.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New approach in dealings with close neighbors, relatives may be necessary. Stress independence, creativity. Be analytical. If you put together various parts, you will arrive at complete story. Know it and act accordingly. Gemini, Virgo persons could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Appearances could be deceiving. Know it, especially where costs are concerned. Promises could come easy, but you should be aware of costs. Someone is going to pay the freight. What's your share?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cycle is such that personality undergoes change. You make move to obtain what is yours.

own — much to surprise of some who expected a "softie" attitude. Be realistic. Stand tall for rights, principles. If you redefine terms, streamline techniques you emerge as "big winner."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on surprise, unorthodox moves, procedures. Back-stage element is "up front". Meant what had been kept a secret comes into open. You have more power than might be imagined. Know it and be amused, not frightened, by idle threats.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on civic, community, civic honor. You get encouragement from one who is not free with praise. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. A "judge" will see things your way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your aim is achieved with help of one in authority. Emphasis on standing in community, civic honor. You get encouragement from one who is not free with praise. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. A "judge" will see things your way.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on journey, education, future plans, getting help — and funds. Another Aquarian could be part of scenario. Your goal is closer than might be imagined. Verification comes via special messenger.

Shady Strips Can Be Landscaped

Many places of totally different character can be difficult for the growing of plants, and for a variety of reasons, but the place I am thinking of today is that narrow, shaded, wind-swept strip between two houses so often found in the older sections of cities and towns where two- and three-storey buildings are set on foot lots.

On one side of the building there is usually a walk to the back door, while the other side has possibly been subjected to several attempts at landscaping or planting, and there may be some of the plants managing to maintain some degree of survival.

Difficult spots of this nature usually have very poor soil. Before we can succeed with any plants of a desirable type the soil has to be improved. The first step is to remove the annual weeds and the roots of any perennial weeds that may be growing there, and then turn over the soil to a full spade's depth.

This will give a clue to the kind of soil we have to deal with and its general condition.

There is often a fair coating of moss on the surface if the area is in total shade. This can be turned under to increase the humus content. There may be tin cans, builder's rubble, wood scraps, rocks and stones. All scraps of wood and metal should be removed, also the larger stones should be retained to facilitate drainage.

The soil can be left rough to allow air to penetrate while we do some other jobs in the vicinity.

Broken eavestrough and downspouts often contribute to the poor condition of the soil, the area being more or less flooded during prolonged winter rains. Such causes of trouble should be repaired before any further work is attempted.

Wind can be quite a problem in these between-house strips, so the next decision to make is whether or not a windbreak is necessary or advisable.

The control of air movement is always a factor in gardening, but we have to be careful that the means we use do not create a condition that is worse than the one we are trying to correct.

The first thing we think of is a solid board fence, which is the logical thing to prevent strong winds from entering the garden. But after the fence is erected, sometimes at considerable expense, we find the wind comes over the top in strong gusts, then tears around inside the garden trying to find way to escape, often doing more plant damage than a through wind.

A solid board fence can cause a winter problem also by trapping cold air and turning the garden into a frost pocket because the air cannot drain away.

GARDENING jack beastall

The best form of protection for a windswept spot is a windbreak, not something to stop the wind, but something that breaks its force and permits it to continue on its way. A windbreak can be made of plants, or an open artificial structure such as a lattice, this latter often being the most effective and cheapest windbreak for these narrow alleys between houses.

On the other hand, a large growing shrub to partially cover the opening at each end of the alley may be a better solution, a tough shrub such as Viburnum tinus, the latter often being the most effective and cheapest windbreak for these narrow alleys between houses.

When this has been completed we are ready to improve the soil by adding a good quantity of humus. It can be well rotted old manure or some good home-made compost thoroughly mixed into the top six inches of soil.

The next thing will be some kind of a pathway, for this may become one of the most interesting parts of the garden that everyone will want to visit. In any case, some kind of a path is needed in order to tend the plants.

In narrow spaces like this, stepping stones are best, judiciously placed, often staggered with plantings between, but so arranged that the gardener can reach every corner without treading on plants or soil.

If the area should be in deep shade so that the kinds of plants that can be grown are limited, some excellent effects can be achieved by using large rocks for the feature rather than a mass of plants; the few plants that can survive in a shaded area being used as a secondary attraction.

The main thing with all problem spots in the garden, whether between houses or not, is the condition of the soil. It must be made suitable for growing plants before any plants can be grown.

Quite often, as soon as the soil is improved the main problem disappears because there are plants available to suit any location in which plants can be grown.

We need plants that will grow in shade, possibly heavy moisture in winter, and will tolerate a certain amount of wind. The plants which do best under these conditions are the plants native to this area.

Pick off all flowers and runners from strawberry plants set out this spring. Select plants in established rows for propagation allowing only two runners to remain on those selected. Remove all others.

Select for flavor, size, earliness and shape of fruit.

Water seed rows with fine rose on watercan to encourage germination. Seeds will not sprout in dry topsoil. Weed seeds lower in soil are more likely to come through.

Pinch out growth tips on broad beans after first pods are seen. This prevents black aphid infestation and does no harm to plants.

Prima auricula going out of flower, remove old stems. Top dress around plants with sandy leafmould, water well.

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — A Rhodesian nationalist leader Friday lashed out at four black African nations for directly supporting nationalist guerrillas and bypassing his faction of the African National Council.

Nationalist leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa, attending a meeting of the Organization of African Unity's liberation committee, criticized Mozambique, Tanzania, Zambia and Botswana for bypassing his faction and dealing directly with guerrilla forces in their Mozambique base camps, conference sources said.

Muzorewa's comments touched off a heated debate that lasted into the early morning hours between the Rhodesian nationalists and the four black nations, all of whom are committed to overthrowing the white minority regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The presidents of the four countries were mandated by the OAU last year to oversee the Rhodesian liberation struggle. The presidents have said that Muzorewa can rejoin them only when he has settled his differences with Joshua Nkomo, leader of the other more moderate ANC faction.

Up to Thursday, the meeting of 21 countries had been dominated by a debate over the future of the former Spanish Sahara, Morocco and Mauritania have divided the former colony between them, despite nationalist claims of Angolan-backed guerrillas.

The committee also adopted a report of an OAU fact-finding mission to the French colony of Djibouti. French forces are withdrawing from the tiny territory and a confrontation is shaping up between Ethiopia and Somalia over control of the area.

The committee also adopted a report of an OAU fact-finding mission to the French colony of Djibouti. French forces are withdrawing from the tiny territory and a confrontation is shaping up between Ethiopia and Somalia over control of the area.

The presidents of the four countries were mandated by the OAU last year to oversee the Rhodesian liberation struggle. The presidents have said that Muzorewa can rejoin them only when he has settled his differences with Joshua Nkomo, leader of the other more moderate ANC faction.

Up to Thursday, the meeting of 21 countries had been dominated by a debate over the future of the former Spanish Sahara, Morocco and Mauritania have divided the former colony between them, despite nationalist claims of Angolan-backed guerrillas.

CAREER SALES TRAINING

Recent changes in market conditions demand a new approach to the selling of real estate. Tight money trends can limit sales for the more conservative real estate company. The largest B.C. western Canadian real estate company, BLOCK BROS. REALTY LTD., offers management opportunities for those who are a proven success.

Management opportunities arise from the fine record of the company and the training offered to our agents as an asset competing for those positions.

If real estate is your career, our training program can assist you in reaching your goal.

Wheelchair-Bound Run Own Home

Four people, all confined to wheelchairs, begin a new venture in co-operative living this month, leaving hospitals behind to share their own home. The house they will live in at 1015 Falmouth Rd., east of Swan Lake in Saanich, will be officially opened Wednesday with representatives of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic and Premier Bennett on hand.

If the arrangement works as well as it has on the Lower Mainland and in other countries, the first group home for the handicapped in Greater Victoria will likely be joined by others, pulling more people now cradled in hospitals back into the stream of society.

The residents, who have not been identified, are two men and two women, in their twenties to forties, who are now long-term patients in hospitals or clinics.

They are all single and want to work. They will pay part of the house maintenance costs from their disability pensions.

The project is a co-operative effort, involving the clinic, government and numerous people who just wanted to help it go.

The house was bought by the Pearkes Clinic, with mortgage provided by the federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. But downpayment for the $60,000 home was provided by the clinic's auxiliary, which will also pick up the renovations bill of $12,000.

The house has a basement live-in suite for an attendant who will be responsible to the residents. There is an intercom system between all rooms and the attendant's suite.

The four residents of the house in effect selected each other in a lengthy process which has worked well in Vancouver.

Now they will be able to choose their own menus, have friends in.

"It gives them a feeling of security, a feeling of being back in the mainstream of life," Pearkes administrator Garth Homer said Friday.

Mercenary Trial Delayed

LUANDA (AP) — The Angolan government has delayed the start of next week's mercenary trial to allow an American lawyer time to prepare his defence of three of the captured soldiers of fortune.

"It is a goodwill gesture on our part," Luis da Almeida, Angola's director-general of information, said Saturday in announcing that the trial opening had been put off from Tuesday to Wednesday or perhaps even later in the week.

Lawyer Robert Cesner is en route from the United States to serve as a defence counsel.

Dr. Almeida said Cesner will defend Gary Acker, 24, of Sacramento, Calif.; Daniel Gearhart, 34, of Kensington, Md., and Argentine-born Gustavo Grillo, whose home town is listed as Jersey City, N.J., although there is a question about his nationality.

The three were among 13 foreign mercenaries captured in the dying days of the civil war that broke out after Angola's independence from Portugal last October.

The others are all British subjects, including Costa Georgiou, alias Col. Callan, accused by his mates of killing 14 British mercenaries who refused to fight.

A government lawyer told reporters that the accused might be liable to death by firing squad.

He also pointed to the fact that CN has a major subsidiary—The Grand Trunk Corp. in the U.S.

He said Grand Trunk became a profit-making operation only when CN stopped "treating it like an adjunct to the Canadian operation" and gave it a strong American identity.

To say that "a recognition of national pride is the key to happier employees and better-looking balance sheets for multi-national corporations" would be an oversimplification, Mr. Bandeen said.

"Can Canada be blamed for being just as concerned about the future needs of Canadians?"

As for Canada's desire for a distinct culture, Mr. Bandeen pointed to the founders of the United States, who "set about defining a separate cultural identity" for the U.S. 200 years ago.

Trudeau Snaps at Farmers

RCMP FILMS PROTEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Three RCMP television surveillance cameras on Parliament Hill were used for the first time in Thursday's demonstration by 10,000 Quebec dairy farmers, but the RCMP say the videotapes will not be used as evidence in laying charges.

Trudeau's Roof Caving

By DOUG SMALL

OTTAWA (CP) — At his East Block office on Parliament Hill, the roof is slowly caving in on Prime Minister Trudeau's head. He and his staff are moving out so the structure can rebuilt.

Increasingly, there are calls for a similar overhaul of the prime minister's political structures—particularly his cabinet—as his government is battered by one controversy after another.

Consider events during the last week:

—Defence Minister James Richardson and Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer are badgered daily by the opposition for their handling of the ill-fated Lockheed Orion airplane purchase.

—Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde is forced by cash-strapped provinces to retreat, at least temporarily, from long-discussed plans to reshape the country's social security system.

—Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, who bills himself as the farmers' friend, is pelted with butter and milk by incensed Quebec dairy farmers for government-imposed reductions in industrial milk production.

—Transport Minister Otto Lang draws the wrath of air traffic controllers for government bilingualism policies they say could interfere with their work.

—Manpower Minister Robert Andras and Finance Minister Donald Macdonald are attacked by MPs, provinces and labor leaders for unemployment insurance changes that will annually disqualify about 30,000 from benefits they otherwise would have received.

—Consumer Affairs Minister Bryce Mackay, architect of the current unemployment insurance system, snipes at the government for tightening the rules.

As initiators of government policy, cabinet ministers routinely come under stiff criticism from groups and individuals affected by government decisions.

But recent events appear to be forcing the Trudeau cabinet into a more defensive position than usual.

Outwardly, the prime minister continues to shrug off assaults on his government, apparently treating many as something less than serious.

For instance, when he was asked recently to comment on the Supreme Court case involving the constitutionality of the federal wage and price control program, he quipped that he knew the high court won't find the restraints unconstitutional.

How did he know? asked a reporter.

"Because I telephoned some judges," Mr. Trudeau shot back, in reference to the controversy earlier this year over alleged interference by members of his cabinet with cases before the Quebec courts.

Mr. Trudeau recently has launched something of a counter-offensive obviously aimed at improving his political and public popularity.

He recently made a swing through some northern British Columbia ridings and is planning another campaign-style tour—complete with an out-of-town cabinet meeting—through New Brunswick later this month.

Grave Implications In Court Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has begun the brain-bending task of deciding whether the federal government's anti-inflation controls are constitutional.

Some lawyers say it is the most difficult and important constitutional issue to be faced by the nine-judge court in the last 50 years.

The court completed a 4½-day hearing on the law Friday, then reserved its decision. All parties involved in the legal dispute expect that a ruling will be announced before the justices take their summer vacation at the end of this month.

The decision of the court could also have grave implications for Ontario, which placed the country under three years of wage and price controls last fall, overstepping provincial powers outlined in the British North America Act, the country's constitution. Ottawa is allowed to interfere with provincial rights only in emergency situations where it must act to maintain peace, order and good government.

Ottawa argues that inflation had become an evil of serious national concern which might have led to an all-out emergency.

Whatever the court decides will be a precedent that will more clearly separate the individual powers of the provincial and federal governments.

A ruling that the law is unconstitutional would be a great embarrassment to the Trudeau government. The many wage agreement bindings made by the anti-inflation board would become invalid and the government would have to find some way of saving face and salvaging the program.

The decision of the court could also have grave implications for Ontario, which placed the country under three years of wage and price controls last fall, overstepping provincial powers outlined in the British North America Act, the country's constitution. Ottawa is allowed to interfere with provincial rights only in emergency situations where it must act to maintain peace, order and good government.

Ottawa argues that inflation had become an evil of serious national concern which might have led to an all-out emergency.

Doherty, also of Ottawa, said following the elections that "we are going to stand together and do a job."

However, he added: "I am not going to be able to get along with everyone and I can assure you that everyone is not going to get along with me."

Stewart said his immediate task is to heal the deep rifts "between the far left and the far right groups in our organization."

He said that because of fierce competition between the supporters of leading candidates before Friday morning's election, the convention of actual policy-making "and accomplished little in the way I just feel sick about it."

Eskimo Shamed By Ambush

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP)

— Peter Ernerk, an Eskimo representing the Keweenaw district on the Northwest Territories council, said Thursday that his people were "embarrassed" when an Inuit man "ambushed" Prime Minister Trudeau at the Habitat conference in Vancouver.

"We've got powdered milk coming out of our ears," the prime minister said. "You can't put it back into the cows so I guess you just dump it on Parliament Hill or pour it into the rivers."

He said farmers must follow the milk marketing scheme if they want a steady market for their produce.

marched on Parliament Hill Thursday and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and Regional Economic Expansion Minister Marcel Lessard were pelted with refuse.

Commenting on the protest on Parliament Hill Thursday by Quebec dairy farmers, Trudeau said the government paid dairy farmers $250-million last year out of the taxpayers' pockets.

"You'd think at least they'd say thanks, but no, they just want more," he said in a radio station interview.

TORIES BUCK SMOKING BILL

OTTAWA (CP)—Four Progressive Conservative MPs delayed passage of a private member's bill Friday that would provide fines of up to $100 for people who violate non-smoking regulations in planes, trains, ships and buses.

Yewchuk said if someone violated the non-smoking rule on a plane despite protests from a stewardess, the stewardess would have to wait until the plane landed to ask an RCMP officer to lay charges. Application of the law could be cumbersome because the person may break the smoking law over Saskatchewan while the charge is laid in Ontario where the plane lands.

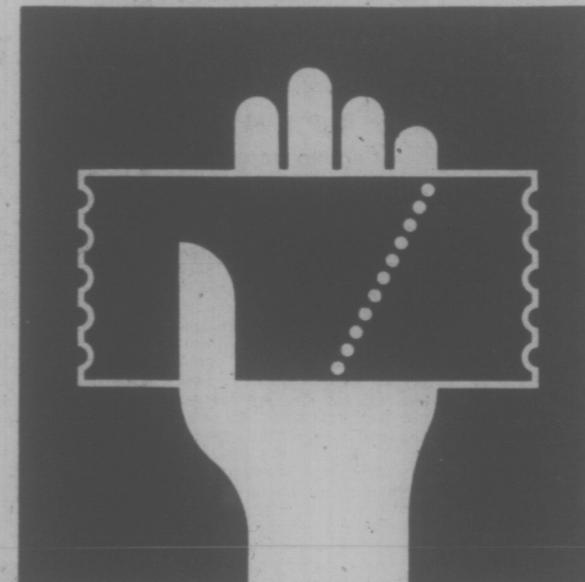

Whiteway mocked the proposal by saying the issue had deep philosophical implications.

He said the public was ahead of the government because it has already agreed to refrain from smoking in designated areas on public transportation.

MEMORIAL TOURNAMENT
Recently the Lubbock Chess Association sponsored the first Underwood Memorial Tournament. Dr. Ralph Underwood, a warm, friendly, hospitable man, was a great promoter of chess and played in almost all important Texas tournaments over a period of 40 years up to his death last year. He was a professor at Texas Tech University until his retirement in 1965 and was a prolific writer, the author of many books on geometry and related math, astronomy and science fiction.

I was Dr. Underwood's guest a number of times in Lubbock. Steven Spencer, Missouri, came in first with 5 out of 5. Jerry Milburn, Fort Worth, was second with 4 1/2. Here's the deciding game of the tournament.

CHAIN SAWS DUMPED

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal department of national revenue has decided that there is sufficient evidence of dumping into Canada of gasoline powered chain saws made by two United States companies for the matter to be referred to the Anti-Dumping Tribunal for formal hearings to determine the extent of damage, if any, to domestic manufacturers.

The chain saws in question are manufactured by McCulloch Corp. of Los Angeles and Besirid-Poulan, a division of Emerson Electric Co. of Shreveport, La. The chain saws are powered by gasoline engines with a displacement of 2.5 cubic inches or less. Until the anti-dumping tribunal, which plans hearings in Ottawa starting June 28, makes its determination, the Canadian government is imposing a provisional duty equal to the margin of dumping.

Nuptial Role —In Writing

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Attorney-General Jim Foster recently suggested that more couples consider drawing up marriage contracts to govern their financial relationship.

Edmonton lawyer Jean McBean, who has recently drafted several such contracts, agrees they are useful but warns against assuming they can cover all financial aspects of marriage.

She says marriage contracts cannot provide for the disposition of property in the event of a breakup. Any agreement made in anticipation of separation will not be enforced by the law.

However, the couple can decide what remains separate property, what is joint property, how costs are apportioned and assets divided.

A marriage contract cannot take precedence over marriage law, Ms. McBean explains. The couple cannot opt out of obligations implicit within marriage, such as the obligation to have sexual intercourse with the spouse only or the husband's responsibility to maintain and care for his wife and children. A wife cannot give up her maintenance rights nor can the husband deny them to her.

Ms. McBean says some clauses included in marriage contracts are virtually unenforceable—agreements about who takes the garbage out, washes the dishes or drives the children to school.

However, even if such clauses cannot be enforced, Ms. McBean says they should be included because they force the couple to examine their goals and expectations within the marriage.

Agreement on whether the wife will work after marriage are not enforceable, says Ms. McBean, but they should be included in any contract.

A contractual agreement not to have children is not legal. If one partner wants to have children, refusal by the spouse is considered grounds for divorce despite the contract.

The couple can agree in the contract about payment of individual debts incurred before marriage.

Ms. McBean admits that most things people want to include in marriage contracts are either contrary to the law or virtually unenforceable. But she maintains the very exercise of writing the contract is its chief value.

"Persons who will not commit themselves to paper are not likely to commit themselves to you," she says.

What marriage contracts represent is an attempt at clarification of expectation and responsibilities in marriage, she says. If a couple can't agree on the terms of a contract, agreement within marriage is not likely to be much better.

No Cigarettes, But Cars for the Asking in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (UPI) — The tobacco store is out of cigarettes. But it doesn't really matter because matches are just as hard to come by.

Fruit and fresh vegetables are in short supply and long lines form each morning outside bread shops. At a news shop on Avenida Marginal, the latest copy of Newsweek is a year old and a set of European magazines features the spring fashions of 1965.

But the national airline has a new Boeing 747 and most citizens can have a car for the taking — left on the street by fleeing Portuguese.

And, perhaps more importantly, despite their hardships and privations, the Angolans have not surrendered their good humor and friendliness. For even the smallest favor, they reply with a smile, "Obrigada, camarada," thank you, comrade.

The stately capital of Luanda — once called the Rio de Janeiro of Africa — bears few scars from the recent civil war. An overturned car still sits in the red dirt outside Dr. Machado Faria's clinic. But few of the buildings still show the pock marks of ricochet-ing bullets.

The new pro-Marxist government has ordered an "operation cleanup" to clear the city's walls of the peeling posters exhorting the population to fight.

"The battle continues," says one. "There is no national independence without economic independence," quotes another.

The new government also has mobilized thousands of local residents to harvest the coffee crop in an effort to gain desperately needed foreign exchange. There are other campaigns to get the transport system moving again and improve food distribution.

A few Americans and West Europeans have also started to arrive and flights in and out of Angola have been recently increased with the addition of a Boeing 747 jumbo jetliner to the fleet of the national airline.

The plane was followed by a group of Boeing technicians sent in to improve the airport's air traffic control system.

Amid all the new programs and cleanup efforts, the government is laying elaborate plans for the televised trial of 13 mercenaries, including two Americans, captured in the civil war.

The mercenaries allegedly fought on the side of pro-western rival factions in the civil war against the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which won the war with the help of Cuban troops and Soviet arms.

The Cuban troops are still much in evidence, although Cuban Premier Fidel Castro has promised U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger they will be withdrawn.

The Cuban withdrawal has begun despite government admissions of continuing clashes with guerrillas in the southeast and along the edges of the oil-rich Cabinda enclave to the north.

Government officials have not said much about these sporadic clashes, but residents say many of the attacks have been targeted against Cuban patrols rather than Angolan soldiers.

Dowry On Way Out?

ATHENS (AP) — The dowry, a Greek man's delight but a burden for a bride-to-be, is coming under increasing fire here after centuries of legal and social entrenchment.

The controversial institution attached to the overwhelming majority of Greek marriages even today, has been submitted by a man to parliament for debate.

Deputy Grigoris Papastergiou of the liberal-oriented Union of Democratic Centre introduced a motion that the dowry system be abolished as "anachronistic and contrary to the newly won constitutional provision for equality between men and women."

Papastergiou also called for a law providing for the "exclusive responsibility of men in bearing the burdens of marriage."

The measures are expected to be supported by the seven women in the 300-member parliament. Most of them are outspoken leaders of Greece's feminist movement, which already has made the dowry one of its targets.

The dowry — proska in Greek — is centuries old. It takes the form of money, real estate or any material gift to the bride by her parents upon marriage. The belief has been that the higher the value of the dowry, the better husband it will attract. Consequently it has often become an object of bargaining by potential bridegrooms known here as prokotires or dowry hunters.

The dowry remains entrenched in Greek laws, which also give the bride the legal right to demand it from any unwilling parent. In the case of divorce, the woman keeps her dowry. A widely read monthly newspaper called Wedding Matches carries proposals by men and women seeking mates and women failing to specify a dowry offer.

A woman without some valued property may often find it difficult to get married, especially in the more backward provinces where arranged marriages are still more common than love matches. Most Greek couples consequently prefer to have sons, fearing future dowry commitments.

Sociologists say the principle behind the dowry was that it should serve as the woman's contribution to the couple's material effort, since the wife was expected to concentrate on the home and family and rarely to work. But this principle is outdated as women enter the professions in Greece's rapidly developing industrial society.

A popular weekly magazine recently argued that a woman's housework alone was a precious dowry. Adding up cooking, cleaning, washing and baby-sitting costs, it put a housewife's value at 240,000 drachmas or $7,500 annually.

"In Athens and other major cities and especially with the Europeanized younger generations you can already speak of a substantial loosening of the dowry bond," one sociologist said. "But in certain parts of the countryside they would think you were insane even to discuss its abolition. Social habits die harder than laws."

The issue caused a major political storm in 1962 when the government earmarked $250,000 for the dowry of Princess Sophia upon her marriage to Prince Juan Carlos, now king of Spain. The dowry won approval in a conservative-dominated parliament, but only after bitter attack on the sum as being exorbitant for a poor country like Greece.

Under favorable legislation for the royal family, Sophia's dowry was not taxed. But Queen Mother Frederika, to counter ill feelings, stepped up her efforts to provide dowries for needy Greek girls.

Fishing Pact Strengthens Canada-Soviet Links

MURMANSK, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — The signing of a fisheries treaty by Canada and the Soviet Union last month brought to light Soviet enthusiasm for stronger trade and diplomatic relations between the two countries.

The treaty, which ensures the Soviets will not object to any unilateral declaration by Canada of a 200-mile fishing limit, was signed in Moscow by Romeo LeBlanc, Canadian fisheries minister and his Soviet counterpart, A. A. Ishkov.

The signing and a later tour of Leningrad and this fishing port above the Arctic Circle by LeBlanc and a seven-member Canadian delegation was characterized by Soviet emphasis on the growth of cooperation.

In the rain at Moscow airport, during a private meeting in the Kremlin, and throughout late dinners under the midnight sun of Murmansk, Soviet officials took every opportunity to express their hope that future relations would be cordial.

In the background but spoken of only in private conversations was the widespread anticipation by both sides of the possibility of confrontation between Soviet trawlers and American fishermen with extension of the U.S. fishing limit to 200 miles next spring.

Canadian fisheries officials say that U.S. legislation providing for a 200-mile limit leaves little room for negotiated treaties such as that achieved by Canada with the Soviet Union, Poland, Norway, Spain and Portugal.

Most of the talk here was of fishing, with the Soviets showing the Canadians their fish plants on the Murmansk waterfront and 5,000-ton factory trawlers that fish off Newfoundland and Nova Scotia for about 120 days at a time.

Two Canadian reporters who covered the signing and the tour concluded that, by and large, the Soviets appeared to be attempting to provide straight answers to questions.

Western correspondents based in Moscow rarely get the chance to visit Murmansk where jet fighters sit in camouflaged shelters beside the town's only airport runway.

So questions put to Yuri N. Bystrov, chief of Sevribs, the northern fisheries directorate, might have been the first he ever had answered for foreign reporters on his home ground.

Bystrov said the Soviet fishing industry shared Canada's concern for conservation of fish stocks in the northwest Atlantic and the northeast Pacific.

He said the view is the Soviet industry should channel the bulk of its capital investment into better utilization of catches.

Bystrov said it was accepted that the fish catch could not be increased so Sevribs planned to make maximum use of available landings.

Bystrov's replies appeared to shed some light on Soviet thinking in relation to Canada's proposed 200-mile limit which could be declared by the end of this year.

Under the treaty the Soviet Union agrees to abide by catch quotas and regulations to be set by Canada within the 200-mile zone while receiving in return a share of fish surplus to the needs of Canadian fishermen.

Catch quotas are likely to be sharply reduced by Canada over a period of several years after the 200-mile zone is established to allow overfished stocks such as cod to recover.

By signing the treaty the Soviets in effect committed themselves to catching less fish than they do now under quotas set by the 18 nation International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF).

The Soviet catch in the northwest Atlantic peaked at 1.3 million metric tons in 1973 but since then has declined.

Fish consumption in the Soviet Union has increased dramatically since the first Soviet trawlers appeared off Newfoundland in the late 1950s.

In the eight-year period beginning in 1960 fish consumption grew by almost 50 per cent while meat consumption rose by only four per cent.

An internal distribution system considered inefficient by Western standards and shortcomings in grain production left many cattle raising areas without sufficient feed during the last year, resulting in a current beef shortage.

The Soviet government recently asked citizens to eat fish every Thursday.

However, the treaty contains a clause that could give the Soviets access to more fish without the expense of catching it.

The document provides for future discussions on the expansion of markets for fish originating in Canada and the reduction or elimination of tariff and non-tariff barriers that would interfere with trade in fish products.

This clause was seen by Canadian observers as the first move in developing a Soviet market for Canadian fish, a change in trade patterns that likely would be welcomed by Newfoundland and Nova Scotia fishermen in times of low prices.

Virtually all Newfoundland and Nova Scotia fish now is sold in the U.S. market. Exceptions are small amounts consumed within Canada.

The U.S. market is subject to periodic price fluctuations with the rise and fall of demand and competition from cheaper Japanese and Korean fish products. Any fish sold to the Soviet Union likely would be under a contract with set prices for the life of the agreement.

The treaty had been signed for only one day when the first bilateral agreement under its jurisdiction was achieved.

The Soviets agreed to give Canada part of their 1976 redfish quota, a move that headed off the danger of fish plant closures in parts of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia this fall.

In return, Canada agreed to help the Soviets obtain a larger share of the 1977 caplin quota to be set for the Hamilton Bank area off Labrador.

The extra caplin being sought by the Soviets would normally be assigned by ICNAF to other countries.

The Soviets agreed to give Canadians and Russians detailed to say how much redfish and caplin were involved but other sources said Canada obtained access to an additional 14,000 tons of redfish.

But it was Kyrill Mazurov, first deputy chairman of the Council of Ministers and Soviet Premier Kosygin's right-hand man, who gave the broader Soviet view.

Mazurov issued an unexpected invitation for LeBlanc to meet with him privately in the Kremlin during the Canadian minister's final day in Moscow.

The 35-minute meeting was described later by LeBlanc, who quoted Mazurov as saying that the Soviet government attached great importance to the fisheries treaty. He said Mazurov expressed the hope that other agreements of a similar kind might be concluded.

He said the Soviet deputy suggested the relationship between their two countries should be deepened "in all areas of mutual interest."

Mines Cheer Tax Repeal

British Columbia's mining industry has welcomed taxation changes announced by Mines Minister Tom Waferland Friday repealing the NDP's Mineral Royalties Act.

Starting Jan. 1, 1977, mines will pay a provincial tax of 17.5 per cent on net income.

This replaces a five per cent royalty on all production plus the 50 per cent super royalty collected when metal prices rise more than 20 per cent above a fixed base level.

Mining Association of B.C. president Douglas Little said the tax changes will encourage mining development in the province.

The industry was sharply critical of the royalties because mines were taxed even when they had no net income. They had also been critical of ministerial discretion in granting production permits. Little said the new legislation removes most of this discretion and will create more confidence and optimism in the industry.

R. F. Sheldon, president of the B.C. and Yukon Chamber of Mines, said the mining amendments will give prospectors a chance to stake claims and explore for minerals knowing the right to mine is included.

The association said an exemption allowing mines with income of less than $25,000 to operate completely free of the mining tax would encourage the development of small but high-grade pockets of ore.

Morton Pratt, divisional manager of Utah Mines, which owns Island Copper Mine at Port Hardy, said the legislation was no surprise but "it was still a relief for mining companies."

A union spokesman said today replacement of the royalty tax by a profit tax won't end the problems of the mining industry, and will enable many companies to pay minimum taxes.

Monty Alton, B.C. and Yukon area supervisor of the United Steelworkers of America, said the legislation can't solve the problem of depressed world prices for many minerals.

He said that when the world market slumps, B.C. mines shut down, and this has been happening over the past few years.

Significantly, the new legislation will not apply to coal.

Earlier, Premier Bennett said that instead of reducing taxes for the coal industry, he likely would increase them as the price of coal rises. He said coal should be treated like oil and natural gas, where government revenues increase as the prices go up.

Sand and gravel were also excluded from the new taxation amendments.

The change enables companies to forecast precisely what taxes they will pay in any given year, he said.

The new tax rate makes maximum mining tax payable 56.8 per cent on net income. This includes the federal income tax of 27 per cent, the B.C. corporation income tax of 15 per cent and the new mining tax of 17.5 per cent.

Because of processing allowances, most mining companies would be paying only 14.8 per cent mining tax rather than 17.5 per cent, Waferland said.

He said the production royalties will continue to be collected for the remainder of 1976. This money, however, can be written off by mining companies against their new PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — A primitive 60-foot sailing canoe has ended a 2,400-mile voyage from Hawaii designed to show that ancient Polynesians could have sailed the vast Pacific guided only by waves and the stars.

More than 10,000 people were on hand when the double-hulled canoe named Hokule'a sailed into Papeete harbor Friday, 34 days after leaving Hawaii.

The 15-man crew sailed without modern navigation equipment, but there were some concessions to the 20th century.

Radio equipment was aboard and an escort vessel was nearby, though out of sight.

The voyage was a U.S. bicentennial project of the state of Hawaii.

KITIMAT — About 400 management personnel at the Alcan smelter here were still under siege today by striking union workers who voted against Friday night to defy a back-to-work order by the Labor Relations Board.

The siege began Wednesday when 1,800 workers, members of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers, Local 1, blockaded all roads in and out of the plant with boulders, logs and pickets, company spokesman Brian Hemmingway said in a telephone interview from the plant.

He said the tires of all cars at the plant were slashed and telephone wires were cut Wednesday night, but later repaired.

Food was being airlifted by helicopter to the stranded section management personnel and supervisory staff, who were sleeping on couches in lounges and sponge rubber mats scattered on the floor.

Hemmingway said the locked-in personnel were working in shifts on the production line. He said morale among the men was good, although they hadn't seen their families since Wednesday.

An elected municipal official said today the situation was tense and he added that members of council had been placed on stand by, ready to meet in the event the situation worsens.

An RCMP spokesman said police were aware of the tire slashing and telephone wire cutting and were conducting an investigation.

Union president Peter Burton said Friday that union members voted 60 per cent in favor of continuing the strike despite a recommendation by the executive to return to work. Friday night's vote was 55 per cent against returning.

An Alcan spokesman said the company will go to the B.C. Supreme Court for an injunction against the union.

The workers signed a two-year agreement with Alcan in January, but the federal Anti-Inflation Board rolled back an 11-per cent wage increase to eight per cent.

In Montreal, the company said Friday the surprise nation-wide strike against Alcan Aluminum Ltd. will cost the company $25 million to restore improperly shut down smelting lines.

Alcan said pickets at four Canadian smelters prevented non-unionized staff from entering the plant to minimize damage to the potlines.

Baker said he understands the resignation was requested by J. M. DesRoches, the deputy supply minister.

Ottawa (CP) — A total of 882,000 people received unemployment insurance benefit payments of $397.00 million during March, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

This is three per cent fewer than the 891,000 who received unemployment benefits a month earlier, but the net payments in March were well ahead of the $341.91 million paid out in February.

Compared with March a year ago, payments this year were up $160 million. The total paid out in March, 1975 was $298.87 million. Figures were not supplied on the number of people who received unemployment benefits in March last year.

For the first three months of 1976, net benefit payments were up 21 per cent from the comparable three-month period a year ago to $108 billion.

The report about Larry Stopforth was given in the Commons by Walter Baker, Conservative House leader, and was not denied by Supply Minister Jean-Pierre Goyer, who told reporters such dealings with public servants are not his responsibility.

Baker said he understands the resignation was requested by J. M. DesRoches, the deputy supply minister.

'Kaffir' Insult Illegal

CAPE TOWN (Guardian) — Calling a black man a "Kaffir" will from now on be an illegal act in South Africa.

A local judge has ruled that the description is an "illegal assault on the dignity" of a black man and has awarded Delase Ciliza $135 in damages plus costs for being insulted by a policeman.

The judge reversed an earlier decision by a magistrate who has refused damages to Ciliza after a heated incident in a Durban street. The judge said that every one had the right to courteous treatment from the police.

He rejected a definition in a 1933 edition of the Oxford dictionary which said that "kaffir" was not an insulting term.

It is remarkable how quickly the meaning of words change," he said.

Aristocratic Inventor

Eight Years of Work Leads to Unique Opener

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A French aristocrat living in Victoria has invented something that should make housewives and the elderly purr with gratitude — a handy jar and bottle opener.

Count Rodolphe Valery du Cos de la Hitte, a direct descendant of the great Charlemagne, has spent the past eight years perfecting the instrument and securing patents in Canada, the U.S., and Japan.

Working in the basement of an apartment at 595 Michigan, where he and his wife, the Countess, share an upstairs suite with a friend, the Count has made about a dozen of the pear-shaped openers. Each was cut from a sheet of stainless steel then judiciously hand-filed — 50 hours of pain-staking labor per opener. One, a prototype for a plastic model, was made out of wood.

Ill health forced him to halt production about 1½ years ago, but his mind is still alert to the possibilities of his invention... if only he can find a manufacturer.

A prospectus describing the opener has been sent to selected companies in North America by a New York promotional firm, Raymond Lee Organization Ltd.

Last month de la Hitte received replies from two large corporations: Sunbeam and Echo. Both turned down the offer to mass produce the device under direct sale of license of the patent. Neither indicated any reason for rejection.

But that's not enough to discourage the Count who says he's been an inventor for most of his long life.

Born in Hastings, England, before the turn of the century — the date isn't important, he says emphatically — de la Hitte grew up in Britain, Belgium and the south of France where his father had a mine high in the Pyrenees. Close by was the family chateau in the province of Gers, near the town of Auch, 50 miles from the Spanish border, home to the de la Hitte for more than a thousand years.

Today, he says, a cousin manages the estate comprising vineyards and four mixed farms.

He became count on the death of his father. He was seven at the time; his father, 37.

He served in both world wars as a French soldier. During the Second World War, he was active in the resistance movement in southern France helping downed allied fliers escape into Spain. It was not without enormous risk. He says he discovered later his name was on the Gestapo list.

Between wars he was employed with a French road-building firm and in 1936 devised a machine that produced stable tar emulsions, vital for effective road laying. The invention caught the eye of his employer who promptly recalled him to head office in Paris and promoted him to inspector of roads for the company. His new position took him throughout Europe.

The machine, he says, is still in operation in the company's seven tar plants in France. It is, he adds, his most successful invention to date.

Between wars also he met and married his first cousin, Veronique.

Calgary-born, she had gone to France in 1930 on a holiday.

The couple had one child, Helene, who became a film director and sometime actress in Hollywood before moving to Victoria where she and her family now reside.

The de la Hitte left France in 1946 coming to Victoria where the Countess's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tristam Whittle, lived in a house at 25 Chambers.

He says when he landed he had only $14 in his pocket, the family fortunes lost during the war years.

The couple opened a tea house in Royal Oak and then in 1950 he joined the city works department as inspector of Victoria streets. He retired in 1958.

Throughout his life, he says, he's had more than a passing interest in things mechanical.

When he was 16 he invented a new phonograph needle and diaphragm, made of hardened wood.

But the steel and then diamond needles came on the market shortly after bringing an end to it.

In 1948 he developed a fluid differential gear for heavy equipment which he feels would have revolutionized the motor industry had it not proved too difficult to service and thus too costly.

In the mid-50s he devised a nozzle for plastic tubes. He says an American toothpaste company copied the idea and used it in one of its products. He didn't get a cent in royalties.

Then came the jar and bottle opener, inspired, he says, by the common dilemma housewives face in opening tightly sealed jars.

Although his body is energized by old age his mind is still fertile with ideas.

But he's too much of a pragmatist to pin his hopes too high.

"I've never been overly enthusiastic about any of my inventions," the Count says. "I've been through it all, so many times before."

"I've been through it all so many times before."

"I've had one big success ... the first, well, they come like bad dreams that fade away in the morning."

Sooke Spotlighted In Building Surge

They're busy building in Sooke, so busy a regional building inspector is working full time there now.

In the past an inspector from the Langford office spent only three days a week in the Sooke area but the surge in construction has changed that.

In fact, building permit figures for April show Sooke far ahead of the other six electoral areas in the Capital district. For that value of building permits in Sooke was

$1,658,000, with Salt Spring Island second at $705,000 and Langford third at $531,000.

That was an exceptional month for Sooke. But totals for the first four months of the year still have it in second place at $4,536,000, behind only Langford at $4,826,000.

Salt Spring Island is third at $2,282,000, and Colwood fourth at $1,275,000.

The April permits for Sooke include 19 for single family dwellings, three for duplexes and three for multiple family buildings with a total of 46 units.

For the people having business with building inspector Brian Anderson, he is in his office at 6933 Sooke Rd. from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Mondays to Fridays and from 1 to 2 p.m. Monday and Wednesday. The rest of the time he will be making on-site inspections in the Sooke area.

The office is open to 4:30 p.m. weekdays, where building inspection application forms are available.

Q. Can you tell me what the Western Canada lottery profits are spent on? G.S.

A. Profits go to the partner provinces — B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba — on a division related to ticket sales in each, says director John Stewart. In B.C., a committee decides division of the money to three funds which are, in effect provincial trusts — the B.C. Cultural Fund, the Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund and the B.C. Special Events Fund.

The week of May 24 the lottery foundation will be publishing an ad in daily newspapers which details where the money goes, Stewart says.

Seal Kill Sparks American Boycott

The tourist industry in Greater Victoria could be dealt a heavy blow by thousands of Americans who have pledged to boycott Canada until the annual east coast seal slaughter is stopped.

The prospect has tourist industry spokesman worried and at least one local MP will be asked to air it in Ottawa.

Word of the boycott comes in a letter to the Times from Portland lawyer Roger Tilbury.

"More than 5,000 people in Portland alone have now signed pledges that they will not visit Canada, or purchase Canadian products, until your government puts an end to the diabolical practice of the clubbing of immature baby harp seals on the front ice off Labrador and Newfoundland," he writes.

This year's kill, mainly by Newfoundlanders and Norwegians, numbered 127,000 and Tilbury said some studies indicate the seal herd will be wiped out in seven to 10 years.

He said Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc has so far ignored pleas from more than 27 million people that "this barbarism be stopped."

The American lawyer said that since polite diplomacy has failed to move the Canadian government, "a number of us have decided that more direct action is the only option left..."

"We have deep regret that it was necessary to undertake this boycott: My wife and I have visited Canada each of the past 10 years. We thoroughly enjoy Canada — especially Victoria and Vancouver."

"We also realize that if enough people sign these petitions, and hundreds of thousands of our citizens do not move in this morning to grab fixtures.

"I have never seen so many scavengers descend all at once upon a house," he said. "They must have got permission from the owner."

CAR VICTIM STILL 'POOR'

Willard Kenneth Pelkey, 26, of 2753 Beach Road, is still in poor condition in Victoria General Hospital after being struck by a Saanich police car Friday on Douglas Street opposite the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

The accident occurred at about 1:56 a.m. when police said Pelkey walked into the path of the car driven by Constable Lawrence Kinos. Pelkey received head and leg injuries.

Wayne Edwin Young, 50, of Allandale, Colwood, is in fair condition in the same hospital after his car hit a tree alongside Metchosin Road Friday night. He received a fractured pelvis and cuts.

Two More Homes Ready to Tumble

A little more of old Victoria will vanish Monday when wreckers tear down two old homes at 1029 and 1033 Burdett Avenue to make room for construction of a large condominium.

William Reeve, a Burdett resident, said Tallyho drivers used to stop their wagons in front of the two houses to tell visitors about the dwellings' 99-year history.

"I'm sorry to see them go," Reeve said. "They are certainly more pleasing to the eye than a condominium."

He said "scavengers" moved in this morning to grab fixtures.

"I have never seen so many scavengers descend all at once upon a house," he said.

"They must have got permission from the owner."

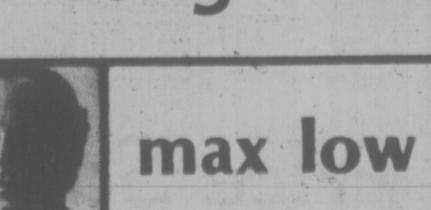

Further down the avenue, a heritage home owned by the Sisters of St. Ann, is also scheduled to be demolished.

The dwelling at 913 Burdett was designed by one of Victoria's pioneer builders of quality homes, Sam MacLure.

An effort was made to prevent the home from being torn down, but city council decided it had no legal authority to prevent its demolition.

Brother Act 'Took a Long Time to Sink Through'

Apprehension crept into the mind of Leonard Soule as a Air Canada jet taxied to a stop on the runway at Victoria's International Airport.

Would he remember? What would it be like after all this time?

Next to him, his wife Helene and their lanky son Ronald played a sort of guessing game, trying to pick which was Leonard Soule's brother as the passengers filed off the plane.

Apprehension, confusion, at a family reunion?

Well, it's understandable.

Neither Helene nor Ronald had ever seen Ernest Soule and Leonard was meeting his brother for the first time in 40 years!

It was, Ernest admits now, all a little comical. Helene and Ronald both picked different people — and neither of those was the right one.

"But they won't tell me what kind of person they picked," laughs Ernest.

Says Helene: "Well, you're much better looking and younger looking than the ones we picked out."

And Ronald confesses: "I picked a guy about the same size, only with a goatee and more European-looking."

Despite the early apprehension, Leonard was the only one who didn't have any trouble.

"I wasn't sure I would be able to tell him," he says, "but as soon as I saw him, I knew it was Ernest."

Why, though, a 40-year separation?

Our grandfather, old C. J. Soule, was one of the really well-known characters in Victoria," says Leonard. "He lived his last years in Sooke."

The farming experiment at Roberts Creek didn't work out too well so the family moved around a bit until the boys' mother died suddenly while they were all living on Hornby Island.

That was 1936 and it was then that the Soule family split up.

Leonard went to Port Renfrew to live with an aunt and Robins who lives with his wife and two children in Sunmerland, and a daughter, 29-year-old Susan Zboyski, who lives with her husband and three kids in Victoria. Leonard is a foreman in the sewer-drainage department of Saanich Municipality's public works.

Ernest, who ran away to sea from his grandmother's, was later taken in and treated as a son by a family in England. A confirmed bachelor, he still lives with them in South Benfleet in Essex and is docks and traffic superintendent at Banbury Tea Warehouses Ltd., the biggest firm of tea importers in Britain.

Ernest and Helene, who came from Nova Scotia, have three children and five grandchildren. As well as Ronald, who is 24, there's 26-year-old family like this," says Ernest. "It took a long time to sink through that he was my brother," says Len.

Of course, the most striking difference between the brothers Soule is the accent.

Lenard is just as settled here, of course, and that's why the brothers have never met in all these 40 years. They did come close, though.

"During the war, we just missed each other in New York and once we were both in Halifax in Nova Scotia at the same time but didn't know it," says Ernest.

They have kept in touch, sporadically, though Ernest complains that Len's a bad letter-writer and admits he's not much better.

Ernest looks at his brother's "second love" — fishing from his boat in the waters around Vancouver Island — this own hobby in England is collecting
